I HAVE A DREAM

- MARTIN LUTHER KING.JR

Martin Luther King Jr. (born Michael King Jr., January 15, 1929 – April 4, 1968) was an American Baptist minister and activist who became the most visible spokesperson and leader in the civil rights movement. He is best known for his role in the advancement of civil rights using the tactics of nonviolence and civil disobedience based on his Christian beliefs and inspired by the nonviolent activism of Mahatma Gandhi. King became a civil rights activist early in his career. He also helped to organize the 1963 March on Washington, where he delivered his famous "I Have a Dream" speech.

King begins his I Have a Dream speech by declaring that this occasion will be remembered as the greatest demonstration for freedom in United States history. He then evokes Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg address and references the signing of the emancipation proclamation, a document that gave hope of a better future to many African Americans. Despite the abolition of slavery and the time that has since passed, black people in America are still not free; the aftershocks of slavery are still felt through segregation and discrimination in the United States.

King refers next to the signing of the Declaration of Independence, describing the document as a promissory note whose promise has not been fulfilled for African Americans. Therefore, King says he has come to Washington to chide the United States for defaulting on this promise in regard to black Americans who have not been granted life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. The bank of justice, King says, surely still has money in it, and there is a debt to be paid to black Americans.

King goes on to declare that the time has come to make justice a reality for all in the United States. He describes the situation as urgent, stating that the growing discontent among black Americans will not dissipate until equality is won. There will not be peace in America until African Americans are granted their rights as American citizens. Though the situation is urgent, King stresses that his fellow African American protesters should neither resort to violence nor blame all white people. The struggle for equality must continue until police brutality is no longer a concern for African Americans, hotels no longer turn them away, ghettos are not their only option, and voting rights are universal until justice is served.

King acknowledges that protesting has been difficult for many. Some of those present have recently been in prison or have suffered other persecutions. He promises that their struggle will be rewarded and encourages his listeners to return to their home states filled with new hope. King famously declares, "I have a dream," and describes his hope for a future America where blacks and whites will sit and eat together. It is a world in which children will no longer be judged by their skin color and where black and white alike will join hands. King calls upon his listeners to look to this vision of America to give them hope to keep fighting and asserts that when freedom is allowed to ring from every part of the nation, the United States will be what it should have always been, and justice will be achieved.

FIRST HUMAN DISCOVERED IN ETHIOPIA

- PALLAB GHOSH

Pallab Kumar Ghosh is a science correspondent for BBC News. Born in India, he came to the United Kingdom in 1963, attended the Hemel Hempstead School and studied physics at Imperial College, London between 1980 and 1983. He has been a science journalist since 1984. He won the Media Natura Environment Award, BT's Technology Journalist of the Year and The Press Gazette's Science Journalist of the Year. He worked as a general news producer on BBC Radio 4's The World at One and then went on to become a senior producer on the Today Programme.

DISCOVERY IN ETHIOPIA:

The discovery suggested that due to the climatic conditions man has modernized as an upright walker. The head of the research team told BBC News about the most important transitions in human evolution. Prof Brian Villmoare of the University of Nevada in Las Vegas discovered that a 3.2 million-year-old hominin in 1974 and they have named it as "Lucy." They had a suspicion whether Lucy belonged to the species Australopithecus afarensis. Homo erectus existed in the age when Lucy and her kin were alive.

EXISTENCE OF PRIMITIVE ANCESTORS:

The 2.8 million-year-old lower jawbone was found in the Ledi-Geraru research area. The fossil which was found in the research area had five teeth in the lower jaw. Professor William Kimbel found the only feature which was distinguished from primitive ancestor was the back teeth which were smaller than that of hominins. The new discovery pushed the research back by 400,000 years to discover a pre-human ancestor. It was very shocking for the researchers to trace out a good change between Lucy and other humans. Prof Fred Spoor of University College London analyzed the new fossil.

HUMAN EVOLUTION:

The change in the climate is the major factor. Due to environmental changes, humans have developed their living style in a more civilized manner. Prof Chris Stringer of the Natural History Museum in London remarked the discovery as a big story. He felt that half jaw bone was not sufficient to conclude the discovery.

CONCLUSION:

Finally, Prof Stringer added that the discovery of early human is a complex picture. Overall, the researchers puzzled with the characteristics which could differentiate the human from the primitive ancestors. Pallab Ghosh's views make the readers to think about the early humans as a vague picture.

POSSIBLE QUESTIONS

- 1. Explain the discovery in Ethiopia.
- 2. Write a short note on discovery of Brian Villmoare.
- 3. Bring out the ideas of Prof Fred Spoor.
- 4. Describe the climatic changes which reflected in the discovery.
- 5. Bring out the ideas of Prof Chris Stringer.

- 8. Elaborate the explanation of science in "First Human Discovered in Ethiopia."

THE FIRST CASE

M.K.GANDHI

Gandhi was not only a great freedom fighter he was accepted as a very good writer. He had a forceful style of his own which mirrored his hopes and faith, his sorrows and disappointments. His style of writing was simple, precise, clear and as devoid of artificialities as the life of its author.

Gandhi was studying Indian law in Bombay. His Virchand Gandhi joined him. He was following dietetics since that time. The study of Indian law was a difficult task. The Civil Procedure Codes are not easy to follow. Virchand Gandhi was reading for the solicitor's examination and he told stories about barristers and vakils to Gandhi. He said, Sir Pherozeshah knows the Evidence Act by heart and knows all the cases on the thirty-second section. Also, Badruddin Tyabji's argument inspires the judges too.

Gandhi said that one always has to spend five or seven years to become a barrister. If they are lucky they can become one in three years. He has a barrister board outside his house but still he was studying Indian law which made him dissatisfied. He developed a deep liking for Evidence Act and read Mayne's Hindu Law with deep interest, but never had the courage to conduct a case on his own.

He took up the case of Mamibai but declined it as he has to pay commission. He came to know that even the great lawyers pay that. He finally had to take up the case without paying any commission. He felt satisfied in earning a little without paying commission. He charged thirty rupees as the charge but unfortunately he was not able to handle his first case as he was extremely nervous. He thought everyone in the court would have made fun of him for not having the ability to conduct a case. He has given up the case and told the agent to seek some other lawyer and given the fees back.

He never checked whether his client won or loose. He decided not to take up any case until he gets enough courage. He didn't take up any case until he went to South Africa. He felt that only a fool can believe in him and give him his case. He got another case of a Mussalman whose land was seized in Porbandar. He took up that because his only duty was to draft a memorial. His friends approved it but he didn't flourish in that too because he charged fees for that.

He then decided to become an English teacher and applied for the same in a school. The principal of that school liked him but he was not selected because he didn't posses a graduate degree in English even though he passed the London Matriculation with Latin as his second language.

He felt disappointed. His brother who was in Rajkot also worried for him. He asked Gandhi to join him at Rajkot. As he has to spend much in Bombay without earning Gandhi felt it as a good idea to move to Rajkot where he can earn something by drafting memorials. He closed his established which he had for six months in Bombay.

Gandhi felt he hasn't learnt anything in spite of his daily visit to the high court. He just slept there and initially he had a sense of shame about sleeping in the court but then he learnt that it's a fashion to sleep in the court and lost his sense of shame.

He says that in the current generation if there are barristers living like him in Bombay, he wants them to follow certain things in life. He says he never took a tram or taxi to the high court as he walked all the time. Even though he injured himself under the sun he says he never ever had an illness. Even after he started earning he kept the practice of walking and reaped so many benefits out of it.

POSSIBLE QUESTIONS:

- 1. Give the summary of The First Case.
- 2. Comment your views on the prose The First Case.
- 3. Elaborate on the experience of Gandhi in Bombay.
- 4. Why Gandhi wanted to choose teaching despite being a lawyer?
- 5. Did Gandhi succeed in his first case?

POEM 1 – L'ALLEGRO BY JOHN MILTON

John Milton was an English poet and intellectual, who served as a civil servant for the Commonwealth of England. He is best known for Paradise Lost which is regarded as the greatest epic poem in English. In his works on theology, he valued liberty of conscience, the utmost importance of Scripture as a guide in matters of faith, and religious toleration toward unorthodox people. L'Allegro was composed in 1645; this poem is a companion piece to Milton's 'Il Penseroso', which focuses on more sober aspects of life. Companion poems are two or more poems that complement each other, usually by showing some kind of contrast. 'L'Allegro' was published in a collection titled The Poems of John Milton, Both English and Latin.

The poem invokes Mirth and other symbolic figures of joy and merriment, and praises the active and cheerful life, while depicting a day in the countryside. Mirth, as one of the Graces, is connected with poetry in Renaissance literature, and the poem in its form and content is similar to dithyrambs to Bacchus or hymns to Venus. However, the pleasure that Mirth brings is moderated, and there is a subtle balance between the influence of Venus or Bacchus achieved by relying on their daughter.

The speaker directs his words to various Greek gods and personifications. He begins by telling Melancholy to leave him alone and go bother the Cimmerians, a people who dwell in unending darkness. After all, spring is a time to expel darkness. He then calls on Euphrosyne, a goddess of joy. The speaker asks her to bring him happiness and all it requires, such as smiles and nods. The day breaks bright and cheerful around him, the sun rises and people start their day.

As he watches the people, the speaker imagines their idyllic small town lives. For instance, a group of shepherds counting their sheep catches his eye, and he imagines that they are telling stories as they guard their flocks. Each villager or bit of nature the speaker's eye falls on depicts his excitement. Some of the sights include meadows full of flowers, cloud-covered mountains, and people telling stories over ale.

Then, the speaker shifts to the life in the city on a pleasant afternoon. In contrast to the shepherds and the village life, the city is home to knight, barons, and ladies. Again, he imagines the story being told, but here it is not shepherds telling tales or villagers talking in over ales. Instead, people go to the theatre in the evening and are excited to listen to the verses and watch the action. He notes the Hymen, Greek God of Marriage, often appears at feasts that could amaze the imagination of young poets.

Like how singers mention other musicians in their lyrics, even in poetry, Milton name drops Ben Jonson and William Shakespeare. Someone reading the poem during Milton's time would have immediately recognized Jonson and Shakespeare as stars in the realm of theatre. He closes the poem by calling Euphrosyne again, referring to her as Mirth.

POEM 2 – GOD IS A MEDICINE CABINET BY CYNTHIA ATKINS

Introduction:

Cynthia Atkins is the author of Psyche's Weathers and In The Event of Full Disclosure. Her poems have appeared in numerous journals, including, Alaska Quarterly Review, Afrikana.ng, BOMB, Cleaver Magazine, Cultural Weekly, Green Mountains Review, Harpur Palate, North American Review, Poetry Fix, etc., She has been nominated consecutively for 2013, 2014 and 2015 Pushcart Prize. She is formerly the assistant director for the Poetry Society of America. She has taught English and Creative Writing, most recently, at Virginia Western Community College.

Critical Summary:

There can be no single definition of what constitutes God because the word means many different things to different people. Approximately 75% of people in the modern world describe themselves as belonging to an organized religious tradition with over 50% following either Christianity or Islam. The poet Cynthia Atkins has opened a gate to the readers on the existence of God and religion among people in the modern world.

BATCH: 2019-2022

Advantages of Worshipping to God:

Source of hope and optimism:

"The keys to your ethos

held accountable in a drowning pool

of munitions."

Research in psychology indicates that positive attitude is good for our health. For example, people who are optimistic about their chances of recovery from major diseases tend to better adhere to medical treatment plans. They are less bothered by disease symptoms, and have better recovery rates. For many people, God is a major source of hope and optimism.

Promotes feelings of belongingness:

"Yes, every day is triage.

You are the wedge between East and West."

Human beings are social animals and meeting the feeling of belongingness is good for our psychological and physical health. Despite the purpose of religion being a tool for spiritual progression, religion has always been and continues to be largely a social activity. For example religious people, will typically be more inclined to visit regular religious programmes which are a group activity.

Improved mental and physical health:

"This is egregious, the mind's parlor is being wooed

Before breakfast—Even before hitting the sticky gymnasium floor."

Psychoneuroimmunology (PNI), is a relatively recent branch of science that enforces the belief that physicians have held for many centuries, perhaps well before the times of the ancient Greeks. It states that a patient's mental state influences disease and healing. Specifically, PNI studies the connection between the brain and the immune system. Religious people will most likely possess a strong belief in the idea of being healed successfully through God or other divine beings and so as a result, religious and spiritual people have been shown to have a higher ability to experience healing of their own mind and body.

A review of more than 40 scientific studies has found that religion appears to soothe the body as well as the soul, and as a consequence people who are highly religious tend to live longer than others. Several reasons have been given that they include a healthier lifestyle, a positive mental attitude and the social support provided by religious communities.

Food for the soul:

"The pharmacist's widow sanctioned pills like beads in a rosary."

Religious traditions provide many ways to help heal the individual. When individuals are healed, families are healed, and when families are healed, society is healed. So religion feeds the hunger of the soul and your soul has more needs than your physical body does.

Gods in the Modern Age:

Injustice and wars:

"Yes, every day is triage.

You are the wedge between East and West.

You are someone else's war chest."

Humanity has gone to war and fought with itself over many different non-religious things including minerals, resources and land. Much of the conflict and war in the 20th century was also a result of non-religious atheist ideologues with Hitler leaning on the work of atheist philosopher Frederick Nietzsche and Stalin leaning on Karl Marx for support.

Segregation of humanity:

"Battle weary and boot-legged to the nth—Every suit-case holds scrimped labels implying you have filled out many papers and forms.

You've crossed boundary lines, while red sirens

Howl with the dogs.

We have seen civilization advance from the pre-civilization of Neolithic farming villages to the first cities to states to nations and now to transnational communities like the European Union or the Arab hegemony in the Middle East. The harmony and cooperation that religion facilitates within those boundaries is offset by the enmity that the religious rivalries have created between e.g. the Christian states and the Muslim states. Humankind appears to have the capability to finally outdo all the tribal differences and merge into a single global community in the era of unprecedented harmony and cooperation, but religion appears to stand militantly in the way.

POEM 3 – A PRAYER FOR MY DAUGHTER BY W.B.YEATS

Introduction:

William Butler Yeats was an Irish poet and one of the famous literary figures of 20th century literature. A pillar of both the Irish and British literary establishments, he helped to found the Abbey Theatre, and in his later years served as an Irish Senator for two terms. Yeats was a driving force behind the Irish Literary Revival along with Lady Gregory, Edward Martyn and others. He studied poetry from an early age and fascinated by the Irish legends and occult. He largely renounced the transcendental beliefs of his youth, though he remained preoccupied with physical and spiritual masks, as well as with cyclical theories of life. In 1923, he was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature.

"A Prayer for My Daughter" by William Butler Yeats opens with an image of the newborn child sleeping in a cradle. A storm is raging with great fury outside his residence. A great darkness is on Yeats' mind and is consumed with anxiety as to how to protect his child from the tide of hard times ahead. The poet keeps walking and praying for the young child and as he does so he is in a state of daydream. He feels a kind of gloom and worry about the future of his daughter.

He says "As I walk and pray for my younger daughter, I imagine in a state of excitement and reverie" that the future years of violence, bloodshed and frenzy have already come and that they seem to come dancing to the accompaniment of a drum which is beating frantically. These future years are seen by Yeats' imagination as emerging out of the murderous innocence of the sea. In other words, the sea seems to be innocent but is capable of giving birth to those howling storms which are capable of leveling everything.

Yeats wants his daughter to possess fine qualities so that she can face the future years independently and with confidence. Yeats says, "Let her be given beauty, but a more important thing is that her beauty should not be of a kind which may either make her proud of her beauty or distract a stranger's mind and eyes". Those whose beauty is capable of making them proud consider beauty an end in itself. The result is that pride leads them to lose natural kindness in some cases, ripping away relationships which help them to make the right choice in life. Being able to make the right choices in life is a very important thing, but those who have excessive beauty are unable to do so and never find a good friend in the true sense of the world. The great thing about the poem is that it has a specific as well as general applicability. At the same time the poem makes an indirect reference to Maud Gonne also whom Yeats loved so much and yet could not win her hand.

The poet looks within himself and finds that there is hatred inside. He thinks that hatred kills innocence and wishes that his daughter should not harbor hatred. It was because of this unwholesome bent of the mind that Maud Gonne married a fool. The poet wished that her daughter should not cultivate a frantic intellect. He thinks that his daughter can remain innocent if she is free from hatred and intellectual fanaticism. The innocence is self-delighting, self-appearing and self-affrighting. The poet's last wish is that his daughter should marry a person of aristocratic family who may take her to a home where tradition and ceremony fill the atmosphere.

CLASS: B.COM/PA/CA/BPS/BBA COURSE NAME: ENGLISH II COURSE CODE: 19ENU201 BATCH: 2019-2022

In the end, the poem is a prayer for order and grace in a battered civilization. Behind the prayer, of course, are Yeats' bitter memories of Maud Gonne who had come to stand for the tragedy of how beauty and grace can be distorted by politics, intellectual hatred and arrogance.

POSSIBLE QUESTIONS

- 1. Critically appreciate the poem "A Prayer for My Daughter".
- 2. What lesson does the poet learn from his experiences in life and how does that influence the prayer for his daughter?
- 3. Elucidate the qualities the poet wants his daughter to cultivate in her life with reference to the poem "A Prayer for My Daughter".
- 4. What is your observation of the poem "A Prayer for My Daughter"?
- 5. Elaborate the poet's view on beauty with reference to the poem "A Prayer for My Daughter".

TEMPEST – ACT 2 – SCENE 2 - WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

Introduction:

William Shakespeare has become the most famous and influential author in English literature. He wrote thirty-eight plays, one hundred fifty-four sonnets and two epic poems that reinvented and defined the English language. The plays are often categorized as tragedies, comedies or histories. Tragedies featured sympathetic protagonists who were doomed by their flaws. Comedies tended to be more upbeat, with happy endings that often led to a marriage. The historical plays were frequently politically motivated to appeal to the Elizabethan court and featured British and Scottish kings.

Caliban - The Monster:

Caliban enters with a load of wood, and thunder sounds in the background. Caliban curses and describes the torments that Prospero's spirits subject him to: they pinch, bite, and prick him, especially when he curses. As he is thinking of these spirits, Caliban sees Trinculo and imagines him to be one of the spirits. Hoping to avoid pinching, he lies down and covers himself with his cloak.

Trinculo's plan of making money out of Caliban:

Trinculo hears the thunder and looks about for some cover from the storm. The only thing he sees is the cloak-covered Caliban on the ground. He is not so much repulsed by Caliban as curious. He cannot decide whether Caliban is a "man or a fish". He thinks of a time when he traveled to England and witnessed freak-shows there. Caliban, he thinks, would bring him a lot of money in England. Thunder sounds again and Trinculo decides that the best shelter in sight is beneath Caliban's cloak, and so he joins the man-monster there.

Trinculo torments Caliban:

Stephano enters singing and drinking. He hears Caliban cry out to Trinculo, "Do not torment me! O!". Hearing this and seeing the four legs sticking out from the cloak, Stephano thinks the two men are a four-legged monster with a fever. He decides to relieve this fever with a drink. Caliban continues to resist Trinculo, whom he still thinks is a spirit tormenting him.

Trinculo and Stephano enslave Caliban:

Trinculo recognizes Stephano's voice and says so. Stephano, of course, assumes for a moment that the monster has two heads, and he promises to pour liquor in both mouths. Trinculo now calls out to Stephano, and Stephano pulls his friend out from under the cloak. While the two men discuss how they arrived safely on shore, Caliban enjoys the liquor and begs to worship Stephano. The men take full advantage of Caliban's drunkenness, mocking him as a "most ridiculous monster" as he promises to lead them around and show them the isle.

THE REFEREE – W.H.ANDREWS AND GEOFERREY DREAMER

INTRODUCTION:

In the opening of the drama, football match was taking place with more noise. Wortlebury and Barker were waiting for Potts, the famous Referee. Wortlebury was a chairman of Rovers, and Barker was a manager. They were waiting for the referee anxiously. Barker told him that he might not come but Wortlebury was not ready to hear that, he wanted Potts to come. If Potts would not come there, they would fail in the match. So Wortlebury ordered him to bring him there at three 3'o clock.

BOLTWOOD'S ENTRY:

Boltwood entered there, Wortlebury welcomed him as Potts. Boltwood did not understand anything. Wortlebury told him to act like Potts in front of everyone because in the match no one will notice whether he is Potts or the other man. But Boltwood did not know any rules of football. Barker tried to help Boltwood. But Wortlebury did not hear anything; he told that Boltwood resembled Potts. And when Boltwood came there everyone thought it was Potts. Without Potts the match would go fizzle. Barker too accepted because there was no other way.

BOLTWOOD'S AS POTTS:

Wortlebury said, "For today you are to be Potts, the man the crowd want. The only man who can keep the two roughest teams in the country in order and get away with it. The man who can give the Rovers the championship". Barker consoled Boltwood that he can't escape from this and better he can accept it. Barker taught him when to blow the whistle. Then there comes Sammy, assistant trainer. Sammy rubbed him down and made him ready for the match. The time had come, team had come out and people were waiting for Potts. The game started with a loud noise. Barker and his wife Diana entered discussing about Wortlebury that he was a wooden hearted person. Diana felt sad for Boltwood that he know nothing about the game but Barker made him as a Referee. Barker showed Diana, the picture of Potts but she misunderstood that was Boltwood.

Barker's Pride:

Barker triumphantly told that she got confused and accepted her brother as Potts. Boltwood entered with Sammy. He was happy that he did his job correctly; Sammy told him that he would never forget this match. Sammy was ready to rub him but Boltwood refused, there comes Beryl, daughter of Wortlebury. She told the newspaper men were criticizing and the police men were doing terrible job of controlling the crowd. But in the middle Boltwood was so cool like the cucumber. She felt sorry for him, because her father persuaded him to do this.

Above all she wanted him to do this and everyone expected the same. There comes Boffin, the captain of Celtic. He was threatening Boltwood that, if Celtic did not win this match, Potts would be no more. He came out to the ground.

Boltwood's Escape:

Kettle, the Rovers met him to ask something. He wanted to know the reason for disallowing a nice goal. He kicked the ball with his left foot and he thought he tried to deceive the goalkeeper. Diana entered to speak with Wortlebury that he did a horrid thing to Boltwood, his father would not accept this anymore. She was afraid that something would happen to Boltwood. Beryl told her father that he forced him to the football match. Wortlebury consoled them that the match was over. Baker and Sammy came there with Boltwood in a sack. They helped him to escape from the crowd.

CONCLUSION:

There came Potts with a furious face. He wanted to meet Boltwood. Reporter entered praising Potts. The match started as a dirtiest one but ended like milk and water. The newspaper would be filled with the headings of Potts like, "Potts the Genius", "Rough Play Burlesqued", "The Death Knell of Dirty Football". Beryl entered with paper and Boltwood read that. Everyone was happy at the end.

Active and Passive

Voice

Voice is a form of verb showing subject acts or has acted to it.

Active Voice

A feature of sentences in which the subject performs the action of the verb and the direct object is the goal or the recipient.

(Ex)The mechanic fixed the car.

Passive Voice

A feature of sentences in which the object or goal of the action functions as the sentence subject and the main verb phrase includes the verb to be and the past participle.

(Ex) The car was fixed by the mechanic.

Characteristics of active voice

- The subject of sentence in active form is at the starting of the sentence.
- Subject is followed by the form of 'to be', verb and object.
- We can say that verb is in the Active Voice.
- An active voice tells clearly about the action that has done it.

Characteristics of passive voice

- When we change the sentence from active to passive voice, the object becomes the subject.
- We can use sentences with only transitive verbs in passive voice that is we can change the sentences having object into this voice.
- This form may or may not tell clearly about the action that has done it.

Meeting Minutes

Meeting minutes can be defined as written or recorded documentation that is used to inform people of what happened during the meeting and define the next step planned.

Effective Meeting Minutes

- The names of the participants
- Agenda items
- Calendar or due dates
- Actions or tasks
- The main points
- Decisions made by the participants
- Record what is the most important points
- Future decisions
- Documents: images, attached files

Seven Guidelines for an Effective Meeting Agenda:

Create Your Meeting Agenda 3 Days In Advance

Follow a process, whether it's sent through email or printed and distributed, make sure everyone on your team knows what to expect. Sending it in advanced ensures that attendees have sufficient time to prepare or read through any notes they will need before the meeting and raises flags if the objective doesn't match their expectations.

Start with the Simple Details

- What time it should start?
- Who should be attending?
- The place or dial-in information for accessing the meeting

The Meeting Objective

- If asked why you are meeting, the objective should answer this in no more than 2 sentences.
- Once the goal is established, prioritize the list of topics from most important to least

Time per Topic

- Let the content dictate how long each topic should take.
- Don't fall into the trap of over scheduling time per topic.

Ex: Introductions (2 minutes)

CLASS: B.COM/PA/CA/BPS/BBA COURSE NAME: ENGLISH II
COURSE CODE: 19ENU201 BATCH: 2019-2022

People tend to schedule time-based on the automatic 30 minute time block in their default calendar even if it could be done in 15 minutes or requires 45. Let the content dictate time, not the software.

Keep the agenda to less than 5 topics

- No one wants to spend 2 hours in a meeting. Long agendas seem discouraging and often don't get read.
- Include any other relevant information for the meeting.

Ex: Stephen will be taking meeting minutes.

Ex: Please read the attached document on weekly sales numbers prior to the meeting.

If someone sends an invite with no agenda

- Come up with a company policy to deal with agenda-less meetings.
- A common solution is to decline any invites that don't include the necessary information to have a productive meeting.

Agenda:

- 1) Intro (2 minutes)
- 2) Review previous year's sales metrics (10 minutes)
- 3) Review upcoming paper lead accounts (5 minutes)
- 4) Set targeted goals (5 minutes)

AGENDAS FOR DIFFERENT TYPES OF MEETINGS

A meeting agenda is a vital element of a meeting and must be carefully prepared beforehand. It contains the topics for discussion during for the upcoming meeting. Having a clear agenda helps the participants to prepare for it. For more information about preparing a meeting agenda, please read this article. An equally important element in the conduct of a meeting is the minutes of the meeting. The minutes form a written record of everything that was discussed during the meeting.

- A project meeting is held on a periodic basis to monitor project development and discuss all issues which need to be addressed.
- A staff meeting provides an opportunity for the staff of a unit in an organization to sit down together and discuss matters of mutual concerns.
- The one-on-one meeting is a meeting between a supervisor and his direct report. The purpose of a one-on-one meeting is to evaluate how the staff member is doing and to resolve any issues related to the performance of their work.
- A daily huddle is a brief meeting conducted before the start of a workday or a shift where the team leader or supervisor outlines the tasks for the day, ongoing promotions, and all other important matters that the staff members need to know in relation to their jobs and organization.

- A status meeting is where the project team discusses the status of a project, and this is where they keep track of the issues and risks facing the project.

Note-taking and Note-making

We distinguish between note-taking and note-making. Note-taking is a passive process which is done at lectures whereas note-making is more active and focused activity where you assimilate all information and make sense of it for yourself.

Note-taking

Taking notes is an important process. It allows you to have a written record of the lecture which may not be in your textbook. It also ensures that you become an active and involved listener and learner. A more important reason for taking notes is that there is a direct relationship between what happens in lectures and what comes up in the exam. If the lecturer does not personally set the exam, it is likely that he/she will still submit a number of questions.

Note-taking it is important to consider the lecturing style adopted by different lecturers. Some will prefer dictating, others will provide printed notes. If you are a Wits student you will also have the lecture slides posted on SAKAI.

The following areas are covered below:

- Setting the stage
- Listening actively
- Formatting and structuring notes
- General note-taking tips
- If the lecturer talks too fast
- Note-taking abbreviations
- The note-making process

Setting the stage

- Complete outside assignments: Lecturers assume that students have completed assignments or done the recommended reading and will construct their lecture accordingly. The more familiar you are with the topic, the better your note-taking will be and the more active the process will be. It is also a good idea to reiew your assignments/readings just before the lecture.
- Bring the right materials:

CLASS: B.COM/PA/CA/BPS/BBA COURSE NAME: ENGLISH II
COURSE CODE: 19ENU201 BATCH: 2019-2022

 Always have an adequate supply of A4 note paper /exam pads, pens, pencils and highlighters.

- Use paper that can be filed easily. It is probably a good idea to only use one side of a sheet of paper this allows you to review your notes by spreading them side to side usually the benefit outweighs the cost of the paper.
- o Keep a spare pen don t use pencil to write as this tends to fade with time.
- o Use colour for emphasis; to highlight and to separate different sections or ideas.
- Sit front and centre sit in a position where you can hear and see clearly without straining.

Listening Actively

This involves actively concentrating and paying attention to what is being said and how it is being said. Listen beyond words to the lecturer's body language.

- 1. Listening for repetition: When a lecturer repeats a phrase or idea, this is a signal that it is important and you should take note of it.
- 2. Watch the board or overhead projector: If the lecturer takes time to write something down, consider that as another sign that the material is important.
- 3. Listen for introductory, concluding and transition words and phrases. For example:
- a. "The following three factors"
- b. "In conclusion"
- c. "The most important consideration"
- d. "In addition to"

Highlight obvious clues: Often your lecturer will blatantly point out what information is likely to appear in the exam - make a note of this - don't rely on memory.

Notice the lecturer's interest level: When the lecturer seems excited about something, make a note as it is more likely to appear in the exam.

Use pictures and diagrams: This makes the notes more visual and assists in recall. What you need to do is try to find a note-taking format and system that works for you.

FORMATTING AND STRUCTURING NOTES:

1. General note-taking tips

- 1. Give yourself plenty of space.
- 2. Label, number and date all your notes.
- 3. Develop your own system of shorthand and abbreviations
- 4. Use colour, pictures or diagrams to make notes more visual.
- 5. Keep your own thoughts separate this ensures that you don t mistake your own idea for that of the lecturer's.
- 6. Use a lost signal when you find yourself lost in a lecture, make a note of it using a specific symbol and leave space to fill in this later.
- 7. Write legibly: Many people feel that they have no control over their handwriting and resign themselves to writing illegibly for the rest of their lives. However, if you put your mind to it and make it a point to write more legibly, your handwriting will improve. This has implications not only for note-taking but for writing exams as well.

CLASS: B.COM/PA/CA/BPS/BBA COURSE CODE: 19ENU201 COURSE NAME: ENGLISH II BATCH: 2019-2022

2. Mind-Maps

Advantages: Visual; contains lists and sequences and shows causes, is often easier to recall; uses both left and right brain functioning; helps one think from general to specific and puts subjects in perspective.

3. The Outline System

You can use a standard Roman numeral outline or free-form, indented outline to organise the information from a lecture. The outline form illustrates major points and supporting ideas. It has the major advantage of being an active process of organising incoming information.

4. The Cornell Format

If the lecturer talks too fast

- Try to be extra prepared for the lecture before class: Familiarity with the subject makes it easier to pick out key points.
- Exchange notes with classmates
- Leave large empty spaces in your notes for filling in information you missed.
- See the lecturer after the lecture and show the lecturer what you missed.
- Consider using a voice/sound recorder.
- Go to the lecture again if it is offered at a different time.
- Use your shorthand.
- Ask questions.
- Ask the lecturer to slow down.
- You don't have to take down everything the lecturer says verbatim.

THE NOTE-MAKING PROCESS

Once you have taken down notes in lectures, the learning process is not complete. The next step is the note-making process.

Reviewing lecture notes:

Your lecture notes form the basis of your final consolidated notes and your entire examination preparation is based on these. The following should be done on a daily basis:

- 1. Read through your lecture notes.
- 2. Underline headings and subheadings.
- 3. Correct spelling mistakes and rewrite illegible portions.
- 4. Fill in any gaps.

CLASS: B.COM/PA/CA/BPS/BBA COURSE CODE: 19ENU201 COURSE NAME: ENGLISH II BATCH: 2019-2022

- 5. Underline or highlight important sentences or paragraphs.
- 6. Make sure you understand the concepts.
- 7. If you use the Cornell system, fill in the key words in the left-hand column.

Pictorial Chart

A pictorial chart is a visual representation of data by using pictograms. It uses icons or pictures in relative sizes to highlight some data pattern and trends. They are commonly viewed in business communications or news articles to visually compare data. Early written symbols were based on pictographs and ideograms (symbols which represent ideas).

Amount comparison

The amount comparison chart is similar to a stacked bar chart with only one bar. It is a good choice if you have not more than five categories to compare. The power of pictorials is in their familiar shapes, so try to find an icon that represents your categories. Take it to the next level by assigning different colors to each category.

• Size comparison

The key to success when using size-comparison pictorial charts is choosing not more than three categories to compare with very different values. Remember, the human eye can only tell which category is greater, not how much greater. Small changes in values you compare will make the visualization useless.

• Pictorial bar

This is probably the most effective use of pictorial charts. You can use it every time you want to show how much something is in relation to the whole. Just define how many icons get colored and add a text to display to the right side of the bar.

• Facts and figures

Choose this type to highlight quality data you may have. This is a good choice if you need more than 7 words to express your message. The trick here is to choose powerful facts and find the right icon to represent it.

Use a Pictorial Chart

Pictorial charts use icons or pictures in relative sizes to highlight some data pattern and trends, usually to compare the number of units, size or progress. They are good when comparing few categories with clear differences, and can be commonly viewed in business communications or news articles.

Create a Pictorial Chart

- 1. Join Info gram to make your own pictorial chart.
- 2. Select a pictorial chart type (amount comparison, size comparison or pictorial bar).
- 3. Upload or copy and paste your data.
- 4. Customize labels, colors, and fonts.
- 5. Download your pictorial chart or embed on your website.

Bar Graphs

Graph shows relationships between different data sets are the bar graph. In a bar graph, the height of the bar represents the measured value: the higher or longer the bar, the greater the value.

Pie Charts

A pie chart compares parts to a whole. As such, it shows a percentage distribution. The pie represents the total data set, and each segment of the pie is a particular category within the whole. To use a pie chart, the data you are measuring must depict a ratio or percentage relationship. Each segment must be calculated using the same unit of measurement, or the numbers will be meaningless.

Venn Diagrams

Venn diagrams show the overlaps between sets of data. Each set is represented by a circle. The degree of overlap between the sets is depicted by the amount of overlap between the circles. A Venn diagram is a good choice when you want to convey either the common factors or the differences between distinct groups.

Report Writing

Reports generally involve presenting your investigation and analysis of information or an issue, recommending actions and making proposals. There are many different types of reports, including business, scientific and research reports, but the basic steps for writing them are the same. These are outlined below.

Decide on the 'Terms of reference

To decide on the terms of reference for your report, read your instructions and any other information you've been given about the report, and think about the purpose of the report:

- What is it about?
- What exactly is needed?
- Why is it needed?
- When do I need to do it?
- Who is it for, or who is it aimed at?

Decide on the procedure

This means planning your investigation or research, and how you'll write the report. Ask yourself:

- What information do I need?
- Do I need to do any background reading?
- What articles or documents do I need?
- Do I need to contact the library for assistance?
- Do I need to interview or observe people?
- Do I have to record data?
- How will I go about this?

Answering these questions will help you draft the procedure section of your report, which outlines the steps you've taken to carry out the investigation.

Find the information

The next step is to find the information you need for your report. To do this you may need to read written material, observe people or activities, and/or talk to people. Make sure the information you find is relevant and appropriate. Check the assessment requirements and guidelines and the marking schedule to make sure you're on the right track. If you're not sure how the marks will be assigned contact your lecturer.

CLASS: B.COM/PA/CA/BPS/BBA COURSE NAME: ENGLISH II
COURSE CODE: 19ENU201 BATCH: 2019-2022

Decide on the structure

Reports generally have a similar structure, but some details may differ. How they differ usually depends on:

- The type of report if it is a research report, laboratory report, business report, investigative report, etc.
- How formal the report has to be.
- The length of the report.

Depending on the type of report, the structure can include:

- A title page.
- Executive summary.
- Contents.
- An introduction.
- Terms of reference.
- Procedure.
- Findings.
- Conclusions.
- Recommendations.
- References/Bibliography.
- Appendices.
- The sections, of a report usually have headings and subheadings, which are usually numbered

Draft the first part of your report

Findings

The findings are result of your reading, observations, interviews and investigation. They form the basis of your report. Depending on the type of report you are writing, you may also wish to include photos, tables or graphs to make your report more readable and/or easier to follow.

Appendices

As you are writing your draft decide what information will go in the appendix.

- is too long to include in the body of the report
- Supplements or complements the information in the report. For example, brochures, spreadsheets or large tables.

CLASS: B.COM/PA/CA/BPS/BBA COURSE CODE: 19ENU201 COURSE NAME: ENGLISH II BATCH: 2019-2022

Analyse your findings and draw conclusions

The conclusion is where you analyse your findings and interpret what you have found. To do this, read through your findings and ask yourself:

- What have I found?
- What's significant or important about my findings?
- What do my findings suggest?

(Ex )Your conclusion may describe how the information you collected explains why the situation occurred, what this means for the organisation and what will happen if the situation continues.

Make recommendations

Recommendations are what you think the solution to the problem is and/or what you think should happen next. To help you decide what to recommend:

- Reread your findings and conclusions.
- Think about what you want the person who asked for the report should to do or not do; what actions should they carry out?
- Check that your recommendations are practical and are based logically on your conclusions.
- Ensure you include enough detail for the reader to know what needs to be done and who should do it.

Draft the executive summary and table of contents

Some reports require an executive summary and/or list of contents. Even though these two sections come near the beginning of the report you won't be able to do them until you have finished it, and have your structure and recommendations finalised. An executive summary is usually about 100 words long. It tells the readers what the report is about and summarise the recommendations.

Compile a reference list

This is a list of all the sources you've referred to in the report and uses APA referencing.

Revise your draft report

- If you have done what you were asked to do. Check the assignment question, the instructions/guidelines and the marking schedule to make sure.
- That the required sections are included, and are in the correct order.
- That your information is accurate, with no gaps.
- If your argument is logical. Does the information you present support your conclusions and recommendations?
- That all terms, symbols and abbreviations used have been explained.

CLASS: B.COM/PA/CA/BPS/BBA COURSE NAME: ENGLISH II
COURSE CODE: 19ENU201 BATCH: 2019-2022

Author Introduction:

Poe was born in Massachusetts in the year 1809. Edgar Allan Poe is well renowned for his ingenious short stories, poems and critical theories. His poems are lyrical in nature. His stories are tales of mystery and macabre. He is recognized as one of the most popular figures of modern literature in two genres. His contributions are much appreciated for his works in two popular forms such as horror and detective fictions. His works represent the artistic manner of twentieth century. Critics see Poe as a detached artist who is much concerned about expressing his virtuosity than expressing his soul. He is known for maintaining ironic relationship with his writing than maintaining an autobiographical relationship with them. "Poe never lost contact with the terrible pathos of time. He explored the heart of darkness," these lines express the impact of the works written by Poe. He died at the age of 40 in the year 1849.

Summary:

The story was published in the year 1843 in The Pioneer. It is one of the popular short stories written by Poe. It is categorized in the genre of gothic fiction and is considered a classic piece. The story involves the recounting of the incident that happened one night. The tale is narrated in first-person narrative. The narrator is unnamed. The plot involves only two characters, the narrator and an old man.

The narrator in the beginning defends his sanity and explains that his senses are at good state and also boasts about his senses as being acute and sharp. He talks about an old man with whom he lives and that they are at good terms. There does not seem to be any hatred or aversion towards the old man except for his pale blue eyes. He describes the eyes as "Vulture-like" and that his blood freezes and he becomes very cold at the very sight of the eyes. He is very much distressed by the eyes and hence plots to murder the man. In spite of his murder plan he confesses that he loves the man. He again explains his sanity and provides details about his care and precision in the execution of his plan.

As a first step he continuously visits the old man every night for seven nights. For all these days he carefully opens the door of the old man's room to let a ray of light fall over the face of the old man, particularly his eyes. He describes it as evil eye. They are closed all the time. This derails the narrator from murdering the old man. On the eighth night he gets the courage to murder. The old man wakes up after the narrator's hand slips and makes a noise interrupting the narrator. The narrator lets a thin ray of light shine over his face showing the eyes widely open.

He constantly boasts that his senses are so acute that he could even hear the heart beat of the old man. After hearing the old man's heart beat he boldly steps forward, he strikes him with his own bed. After this he leaves the body dismembered body that is he cuts off his hands and legs and conceals the pieces under the floorboards and makes sure that the floor is clean and does not show any signs of murder. However, the old man's scream elicited suspicion in the neighbors who had reported about the incident to the police. They come to the man's place in the early hours of the morning. He confidently tells them that scream was his own which he made during his sleep due to the nightmare he had last night and that the old man is not present in the country. With the same confidence he takes them around the house to look for any abnormality. He makes them sit on the chairs placed above floor board, the exact spot where he buried the man. All of a sudden he hears some noise that continuously rings in his ears. This makes him uncomfortable and the noise grows louder and louder. Finally he believes the noise is not heard from anywhere but from the floor. He believes it is the heart beat of the man. But the officers do not seem to notice any abnormality in the place. The narrator unable to bear the ringing breaks down and confesses that the man is dead and is buried under the floorboard.

Analysis:

The motivation behind the murder is not clearly expressed. Apart from this the details about the narrator and the old man, their location, their relationship are unclear and is uncertain. There exists ambiguity in the details expressed by the narrator for murdering the man. There does not seem to be any feelings of hatred or remorse towards the old man. However the eyes of the old man (Vulture eye, as described by the narrator) has pushed the narrator to the extent of murdering. Other assumptions like robbery can be declined by the reasons provided by him. There is also no proper explanation about the gender of the narrator and other details about him are also left unmentioned.

His parents squashed his ambitions of joining the circus and marrying a Hindu girl, Radha. He loved Radha and found in her his soul mate. But his Parents had other plans for him and married him to a girl of their choice and community, Radha in turn, also got married and settled in life.

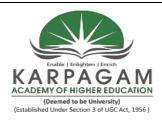

He once heard his father boasting to his mother how well he succeeded in getting his son to accept his words obediently. Rahim Khan then decided to avenge his defeat at the hands of his parents, his family and society. Having decided to take revenge, his first and immediate target was his wife. He saw her as the scapegoat for all his misadventures. His kind soul suddenly became as hard as iron. For nearly thirty years, he ill treated his wife, two sons and his bullocks. He quarreled with everyone in the village. Subsequently the entire village developed a deep seated hatred for him.

Six years earlier his elder son Bundu ran away from home after an unusually severe beating. Three years later his second son Nuru also joined his brother. One day when he returned home from the fields an old lady from the neighborhood told him that his wife had gone to her brother's place and that she would be back shortly. Rahim Khan knew that she would never come back. He suddenly began to feel lonely not because he loved his family but because he had no one now to display his anger. Nobody was there to wash his feet; to give him food and other eatables. His wife's absence made him feel uncomfortable as though a piece of furniture had been removed from his house.

One day as he was cleaning the roof he spotted a small nest of sparrows in a corner. He initially wanted to exert his might on them. But good sense prevailed upon him after long gap and he left them undisturbed. He pulled a stool climbed on it to have better look at them. But the parent sparrows would not allow him to breach into their privacy and they threatened him by hovering around him and fluttering their wings hard at his face. He was amused at the little bird's heroic efforts to save the young ones. He realized their love and care for the family. Soon the young ones grew well and began to move around inside his house. He started feeding them with breadcrumb's and other grains. He called them as Bundu and Nuru after his two sons. There was now total transformation in his temperament and outlook on life. The villagers too took note of the change in him. But they had their own reservations against him. He even stopped shouting at the children.

On a day that brought in a heavy downpour, he noticed that the roof had begun to leak near the sparrows nest. He immediately climbed his roof to close the gap. He came back fully drenched. He had already started sneezing. He failed to take care at once. He woke up the next day with high fever. His only companions now were the two sparrows. He was worried as to who would take care of the two birds after he dies. Couple of days passed. There was no sign of Rahim Khan walking out. The villagers grew suspicious. They sent for his wife who arrived with her sons. His wife and sons returned and saw him lying on the bed and

The girl on the last day of the year goes out of her home to sell matches. The New Year's Eve was so cold and freezing and the streets were filled with snow. The girl has no other option but to walk with barefoot in the cold shivering.

The poor little girl leaves home, wearing the only shoes her mother gave her. They are too big for her little feet. As they are e too big, they fall off her feet, and a boy runs off with one of them while the other is lost in the street. She wants to go home, but she has not sold any of the matches she left home with yet, and knows that if she returns home without having made any money, her father will beat her. But she is so cold, with the snow falling on her, that she goes and crouches in the corner of a house, and lights one of the matches. As the flame comes into life, she huddles round it and imagines a blazing fire and a hot stove cooking food. Then the match goes out and her dream of a warm fire goes out with it. She lights another match and fancies that she can smell a goose cooking over a stove (she has smelled delicious goose cooking in the houses she has passed), and sees a table laid out with food ready to be eaten; but once again the match goes out and the dream disappears.

The little match girl lights a third match, and this time she imagines herself sitting under a Christmas tree in a warm house. She can see and feel the warm candles decorating the tree; but then the match goes out and the girl sees that the candles are only the stars up in the night sky. A star falls, and the little match girl recalls the idea that a star falling means someone has died and gone up to heaven. She lights another match, and sees her grandmother, fearing that it is her grandmother who has gone to heaven. The little match girl, who so longs to escape the cold, pleads with her grandmother to take her with her up to heaven, where there will be no more cold, no more hunger, no more suffering. Knowing that her grandmother will disappear when the match goes out, the little match girl lights another match, and then another.

In the morning, they found the little match girl slumped against the side of the house – dead. She had tried to keep herself warm by lighting the matches, they said. They had no idea of the beautiful visions she had seen, or that she had been happy to escape the suffering and wants of this world and join her grandmother in heaven.
