UNIT-I- NATURE OF COMMUNICATION

SYLLABUS

Unit I Nature of Communication: Process of Communication, Types of Communication (verbal & Non Verbal), Importance of Communication, Different forms of Communication; Barriers to Communication Causes, Linguistic Barriers, Psychological Barriers, Interpersonal Barriers, Cultural Barriers, Physical Barriers, Organizational Barriers

INTRODUCTION

In the changing business environment of multinational competition and globalization, communication tends to become an important component of an organization. Like the functional areas of production, marketing and finance, communication too is shaping into a distinct area, in the form of business or organizational or corporate communication.

Communication is the life blood of social as well as corporate world. We exist because we communicate. Even our silence communicates a lot. We all have a layman's idea of what communication is, but let us try to understand the concept fully so that we can use it effectively. Communication is the process by which we exchange meanings, facts, ideas, opinions or emotions with other people. It is an essential condition of our existence and the most important activity of ours. The word communication has been derived from Latin word "communicare / communis" that means to 'share' or 'participate'. Everybody knows that most of the time, through speech or writing or any other means like exchange of a common set of symbols, we are sharing information with other human beings. It is, therefore, first and foremost a social activity. Man as a social animal has to communicate.

Communication is defined as "The flow of material, information, perception, understanding and imagination among various parties". Business includes those organizations, which are engaged in the production and distribution of goods and services to earn profit. Therefore Business communication means, "Flow of information, perception etc. either within a business organization or outside the organization among different parties".

Simply, Communication is an exchange of facts, ideas, opinions or emotions by two or more persons. General communication is different from business communication / Administrative communication. Business communication means the sharing of information between people within an enterprise that is performed for the commercial benefit of the organization.

Business communication is the specialized branch of general communication that is especially concerned with business activities. Business communication is nothing but, the communication between the people in the organization for the purpose of carrying out the business activities

According to William Scott in his book organizational theory “Administrative communication / business communication is a process which involves the transmission and accurate replication of ideas ensured by feedback for the purpose of eliciting actions which will accomplish organizational goals”

In business communication the materials flow from one person to another person or from many persons to different people. This flow may either be inside the organization or outside the organization.

Since the aim of business organization is to earn profit, the organization will die without profit and this death is a result of the absence of communication. This is why communication is called life blood of a business organization.

COMMUNICATION INSIDE AN ORGANIZATION:

Different employees and officials in an organization need to communicate to each other. This internal communication with its importance is shown in the following way:

1. Setting goals and Objectives:-

Mostly, the organizations have a variety of formal and informal objectives to accomplish. These objectives may be financial results, product quality, market dominance, employees satisfaction, or service to customers. So the communication enables all the persons in an organization to work towards a common purpose.

2. Making and Implementing decision:-

In order to achieve the objective, people in a business organization collect facts and evaluate alternatives, and they do so by reading, asking questions, talking or by plain thinking. These thoughts are put into a written form. Once a decision has been made, it has to be implemented which requires communication.

3. Appraisal:-

Having implemented the decision, management needs to determine whether the desired outcome is being achieved. Statistics on such factors as cost, sales, market share, productivity and inventory levels are compiled. This is done through computers, manual papers, memos or reports.

4. Manufacturing the products:-

Getting an idea for a new product out of someone's head, pushing it through the production process and finally getting the product also require communication. Designing the plan regarding product, introducing the workers, purchasing raw material, marketing and distributing the product all require effective communication.

5. Interaction between employer & employee:-

Employees are informed about policies and decisions of employers through circulars, reports, notices etc. Employers also get in touch with employees through application, complaint etc. So, communication plays a vital role in the interaction of employer and employee.

EXTERNAL COMMUNICATION:

1. Hiring the employees:-

If a company wants to hire someone, it advertises the vacancy, receives applications, calls the candidates, takes the interview and then offers job to the successful candidates. The whole process requires communication.

2. Dealing with customers:-

Sales letters and brochures, advertisements, personal sales calls, and formal proposals are all used to stimulate the customer's interest. Communication also plays a part in such customer related functions as credit checking, billing, and handling complaints and questions.

3. Negotiating with suppliers and financiers:-

To obtain necessary supplies and services, companies develop written specification that outlines their requirement. Similarly, to arrange finance, they negotiate with lenders and fill out loan applications.

4. Informing the investors:-

Balance sheet, income statement, and ratio analysis are used to inform the investors regarding performance of business.

5. Interacting with Govt.:-

Government agencies make certain rules to regulate the economy. These rules are communicated to organizations through various papers. These organizations try to fulfil, these requirement like filling taxation form and other documents.

The importance of communication for an individual and for an organization

“Communication is the process by which information is transmitted between individuals and organization, so that an understanding response results”. “Communication is the process which involves transmission and accurate replication of ideas, ensured by feedback for the purpose of eliciting action which will accomplish organizational goals”.

Importance of Communication for an Individual

(1) Helps in getting a desired job:-

Getting a desired job is not an easy task. It requires a person to be excellent, especially in terms of communication abilities. Communication abilities can be classified into five categories that is reading, writing, speaking, listening and observing. If a candidate is a good reader of not only text books and reference books but also of newspapers and magazines, this would help him developing confidence level at the time of interview. Writing skills are necessary for preparing an appropriate Bio data and covering letter, so that a better initial impression could be created. No doubt, conversational skill right at the time of interview is equally countable towards success of the candidate. Listening abilities on the other could prove to be fruitful especially when the interviewer is making a comment or asking a question. In short we can say that the presence of above mentioned five communication skills could give a better chance of being selected during an interview.

(2) Help in maintaining social relationships:-

We as human beings live in a cobweb of relationships rather social relationship. These social relations compel us to act simultaneously in the capacity of father, child, husband, uncle, neighbour, cousin, teacher, nephew and so on. All these relationships especially near one's could be maintained properly if we can communicate well to all these relations, that we are here to take care of them and our services are always there to help them in case of any needs.

(3) Helps in getting on the job promotion:-

Perhaps finding a job would not be a big deal in case of if the candidate is well connected and belongs to a well off family. But promotion on the job requires some extra skills on the part of the candidate. Amongst those skills, communication abilities rank on the top. If a person can speak well during interactive and presentation sessions, can reports properly, he will automatically be in the eyes of the management and whenever a chance for promotion comes, he will be on the top of the list.

(4) Helps in solving other's problems:-

It is commonly observed that around us there are so many people whom we like to meet; their company is a source of enrichment for us. When we are with them we feel secured. The only reason for such types of feelings is that such type of people are not only good listeners but they also know it well that whenever they would speak, it would only be for the sake of encouraging, not discouraging others, only for solving other's problems and not for creating problems for others. Such people are no doubt excellent communicators.

BARRIERS OR OBSTACLES OF COMMUNICATION

The various inadequacies that can be identified through communication evaluation are required to be analyzed in terms of various factors - obstructions and barriers - that impede flow communication. Any managerial action in this regard can be effective only when it strikes at the very root of the factors that lie at the very root of the problem. From this viewpoint, identification of different factors is necessary. Recognizing barriers to effective communication is a first step in improving communication style. Following are the barriers of communication process.

ENCODING BARRIERS. The process of selecting and organizing symbols to represent a message requires skill and knowledge. Obstacles listed below can interfere with an effective message.

1. Lack of Sensitivity to Receiver. A breakdown in communication may result when a message is not adapted to its receiver. Recognizing the receiver's needs, status, knowledge of the subject, and language skills assists the sender in preparing a successful message. If a customer is angry, for example, an effective response may be just to listen to the person vent for awhile.
2. Lack of Basic Communication Skills. The receiver is less likely to understand the message if the sender has trouble choosing the precise words needed and arranging those words in a grammatically-correct sentence.
3. Insufficient Knowledge of the Subject. If the sender lacks specific information about something, the receiver will likely receive an unclear or mixed message. Have you shopped for an item such as a computer, and experienced how some salespeople can explain complicated terms and ideas in a simple way? Others cannot.
4. Information Overload. If you receive a message with too much information, you may tend to put up a barrier because the amount of information is coming so fast that you may have difficulty comfortably interpreting that information. If you are selling an item with twenty-five terrific features, pick two or three important features to emphasize instead of overwhelming your receiver.
5. Emotional Interference. An emotional individual may not be able to communicate well. If someone is angry, hostile, resentful, joyful, or fearful, that person may be too preoccupied with emotions to receive the intended message. If you don't like someone, for example, you may have trouble "hearing" them.

TRANSMITTING BARRIERS: Things that get in the way of message transmission are sometimes called "noise." Communication may be difficult because of noise and some of these problems:

1. Physical Distractions. A bad cellular phone line or a noisy restaurant can destroy communication. If an E-mail message or letter is not formatted properly, or if it contains grammatical and spelling errors, the receiver may not be able to concentrate on the message because the physical appearance of the letter or E-mail is sloppy and unprofessional.

2. Conflicting Messages. Messages that cause a conflict in perception for the receiver may result in incomplete communication. For example, if a person constantly uses jargon or slang to communicate with someone from another country who has never heard such expressions, mixed messages are sure to result. Another example of conflicting messages might be if a supervisor requests a report immediately without giving the report writer enough time to gather the proper information. Does the report writer emphasize speed in writing the report, or accuracy in gathering the data?

3. Channel Barriers. If the sender chooses an inappropriate channel of communication, communication may cease. Detailed instructions presented over the telephone, for example, may be frustrating for both communicators. If you are on a computer technical support help line discussing a problem, it would be helpful for you to be sitting in front of a computer, as opposed to taking notes from the support staff and then returning to your computer station.

4. Long Communication Chain. The longer the communication chain, the greater the chance for error. If a message is passed through too many receivers, the message often becomes distorted. If a person starts a message at one end of a communication chain of ten people, for example, the message that eventually returns is usually liberally altered.

DECODING BARRIERS. The communication cycle may break down at the receiving end for some of these reasons:

1. Lack of Interest. If a message reaches a reader who is not interested in the message, the reader may read the message hurriedly or listen to the message carelessly. Miscommunication may result in both cases.

2. Lack of Knowledge. If a receiver is unable to understand a message filled with technical information, communication will break down. Unless a computer user knows something about the Windows environment, for example, the user may have difficulty organizing files if given technical instructions.

3. Lack of Communication Skills. Those who have weak reading and listening skills make ineffective receivers. On the other hand, those who have a good professional vocabulary and who concentrate on listening, have less trouble hearing and interpreting good communication. Many people tune out who is talking and mentally rehearse what they are going to say in return.

4. Emotional Distractions. If emotions interfere with the creation and transmission of a message, they can also disrupt reception. If you receive a report from your supervisor regarding proposed changes in work procedures and you do not particularly like your supervisor, you may have trouble even reading the report objectively. You may read, not objectively, but to find fault. Misinterpret words and read negative impressions between the lines. Consequently, likely to misunderstand part or all of the report.

5. Physical Distractions. If a receiver of a communication works in an area with bright lights, glare on computer screens, loud noises, excessively hot or cold work spaces, or physical ailments, that receiver will probably experience communication breakdowns on a regular basis.

RESPONDING BARRIERS-The communication cycle may be broken if feedback is unsuccessful.

1. No Provision for Feedback. Since communication is a two-way process, the sender must search for a means of getting a response from the receiver. If a team leader does not permit any interruptions nor questions while discussing projects, he may find that team members may not completely understand what they are to do. Face-to-face oral communication is considered the best type of communication since feedback can be both verbal and nonverbal. When two communicators are separated, care must be taken to ask for meaningful feedback.

2. Inadequate Feedback. Delayed or judgmental feedback can interfere with good communication. If your supervisor gives you instructions in long, compound-complex sentences without giving you a chance to speak, you may pretend to understand the instructions just so you can leave the stress of the conversation. Because you may have not fully understood the intended instructions, your performance may suffer.

TYPES OF COMMUNICATION

We classify the communication into different types as following;

- 1) Intrapersonal communication – it is talking to oneself in one's own mind. Soliloquies or asides in dramatic work are example of intrapersonal communication.
- 2) Interpersonal communication – it is exchange of messages between two persons. Conversation, dialogue, interview etc. are examples of interpersonal communication.

3) Group communication- it can be among small or large groups, like an organization, club or class room, in which all individual retain their individual identity.

4) Mass communication- it occurs when the message is sent to large groups, for example, by news paper, radio, or television etc.

5) Verbal communication

6) Non verbal communication

7) Meta communication- Here speakers' choice of words unintentionally communicates something more than what the actual words state. For example, a flattering remark like "I've never seen you so smartly dressed" could also mean that the regular attire of the listener needed improvement.

8) Formal communication

9) Informal communication

10) Electronic communication

CHANNELS OF COMMUNICATION

Channel of communication means how communication flows from one point to another point. It may be divided into the following types

- Internal Communication,
- External Communication

1. INTERNAL COMMUNICATION:

When the flow of communication is within an organization it is internal communication. It does not include outsiders. Internal communication helps people to interact in the organization to plan, organize, staff, lead and control. It is used by all people in the organization at every level. It is Intra-company communication. Internal communication can be further subdivided into the following parts or channels:

- Horizontal communication
- Downward communication
- Upward communication

Horizontal Communication

It is the communication between people of the same department, or with other people of the same level in other departments. It is also called cross-wise communication. Horizontal communication helps in sharing information through meetings, chats, brain storming sessions and peer-to-peer talk.

Downward communication

When the flow of communication is from the superior level to a downward level it is called downward communication. When managers pass instructions to subordinates they are using the downward channel of communication. Downward communication helps in leading, giving policies and procedures, assigning tasks and controlling subordinates.

Upward Communication

When the flow of communication is from the subordinate to the upper level it is called upward communication. When subordinates submit reports and give information to managers they are using upward channel of communication. Upward communication helps in submitting reports, appeals, requests, sharing problems or asking for advice and guidance.

2. EXTERNAL COMMUNICATION

In external communication the flow of information is outside the organization. It is Intercompany communication. It is used to communicate with vendors, suppliers, competitors, Government, Consumer groups and general public. In external communication special care and consideration has to be given as it is also important for the goodwill and image of the company. Legal aspects are also given special attention while communicating externally

DIFFERENTIATE BETWEEN FORMAL AND INFORMAL LANGUAGE;

Formal language Informal Language

(1) It is the language spoken in office, business and other formal places.

It is the language spoken at home or with friends.

(2) Proper and standard words are used.

Improper words and slangs are used.

(3) It consists of specific purpose words like manager, supervisor, owner, employer etc.

It has all purpose words like “boss” that stands for various personalities.

(4) It is used comparatively less than informal language. It is used in daily life

5) It is used when the speaker is relaxed. It is used when speaker is in a hurry.

THE PROCESS OF COMMUNICATION.

Communication simply means exchange of ideas & information between two persons. A person sends a message to another person and gets the response from the receiver on the message. This whole phenomenon can be explained as under.

1. Sender's thoughts:-

The very first step in the process of communication is generation of thought in the sender's mind. These thoughts may be about a request, order, inquiry production or any other such activity.

2. Encoding / Message:-

The thought generated in the mind of sender is ambiguous and unable to be communicated unless it is put into a receivable form. This step is known as encoding where the sender converts his thought into a message by means of a language. For example, a sender thinks about having a job. Now, he will put his thought on a paper. That is called job application. In his way, his thought becomes a message.

3. Transmission through media:-

Once a thought is converted into message, it should be transmitted to the receiver through a suitable medium. This media might be electronic media as T.V., E-mail, radio etc. or it may be print media like newspaper, magazines, letters or merely sound that is transmitted through the medium of air.

4. Noise and Barriers:-

While transmitting the information to the receiver, the sender faces lots of barriers. These noise and barriers are explained as under:

(i) On sender's side:- Noise and barriers may take place during the process of encoding. Some of them may be caused by distraction, lack of concentration, typing mistake, poor language etc.

(ii) In the medium:- Some barriers are caused by medium such as poor transmission on T.V. and radio misprinting in newspapers etc.

(iii) On receiver's side:- The receiver can also create certain barriers to the receiving of message such as poor reading ability, emotions, lack of concentration etc.

5. Decoding by Receiver:-

Having received the message from the sender, the receiver attempts to understand and interpret the message. This process of converting the language of message into thoughts is known as decoding. For instance, the receiver, having received job application, reads the application and understands the message conveyed by the applicant.

6. Idea Received:-

As soon as the process of decoding is finished, the idea given by the sender is received by the receiver. It means the thought that was generated in the mind of sender has been transmitted to the mind of receiver. In our example, the sender wanted to inform the receiver about his thought of having a job. Now the sender has got this idea.

7. Feed back:-

Process of communication is incomplete until the receiver responds to the sender. This response may be negative, positive, or for further enquiry. It means when the receiver of job application welcomes or regrets the sender, the process of communication is deemed to be complete. This whole process can be depicted through the following diagram.

FIVE ELEMENTS (FACTORS) OF THE PROCESS OF COMMUNICATION:

Communication as a process can be understood from the given diagram. A sender encodes the message, and sends it using a channel to a receiver, who then decodes the message. The receiver, in turn, encodes his feedback on the message received, and sends it to the sender, which is then decoded by the sender. Different channels or media is used for this transmission of message. Noise, in the communication process, refers to any obstruction that hampers the transmission of the message from the sender to the receiver or the feedback from the receiver to the sender. Noise here can refer to both the verbal and non-verbal cues, oral and written communication etc. For instance, language barriers, misinterpretation of symbols used, incoherent diction and articulation, unintelligible handwriting etc.

Communication is the exchange of ideas between two minds. This process of exchanging idea is based on following five factors.

1. Sender:-

Sender is the person who initiates the process of communication. He generates an idea in his mind regarding production invention, innovation, request, order, enquiry etc. So, he is the first factor of communication process and his function is to generate an idea. Therefore, it is necessary that the idea should be clear, and convertible into message. For this purpose, the sender needs to apply his knowledge and imaginative power.

2. Message:-

The idea in the mind of sender is transformed into words that is called message. The sender decides on the length, style, organization and tone of the message. The message may be presented in many ways, depending on the subject, purpose, audience, personal style, mood and cultural background.

3. Media:-

The media of transmission of message are electronic media as T.V., radio, computer and print media as newspapers, letter, magazine etc. media play a very important role in helping the receiver's understand the message. A wrongly chosen medium can interrupt the process of communication; Selection of medium depends upon message, audience, urgency and situation.

4. Receiver:-

Receiver is the person who gets the message from the sender, decodes it, understands it and interprets it.

5. Feed Back:-

Having understood the message, the receiver responds to the sender in yes or no or asks further questions. This process is called feedback.

FORMAL COMMUNICATION

Formal communication refers to interchange of information officially. The flow of communication is controlled and is a deliberate effort. This makes it possible for the information to reach the desired place without any hindrance, at a little cost and in a proper way. This is also known as 'Through Proper Channel Communication.'

CHARACTERISTICS

Following are the chief characteristics of the formal communication:

(1) Written and Oral:

Formal communication can both be written and oral. Daily works are handled through oral communication, while the policy matters require written communication.

2) Formal Relations:

This communication is adopted among those employees where formal relations have been established by the organisation. The sender and the receiver have some sort of organizational relations.

(3) Prescribed Path:

The communication has to pass through a definite channel while moving from one person to another. For example, to convey the feelings of a worker to the manager, the foreman's help has to be sought.

(4) Organizational Message:

This channel is concerned with the authorized organizational messages only and the personal messages are out of its jurisdiction.

(5) Deliberate Effort:

This channel of communication is not established automatically but effort has to be made for its creation. It is decided keeping in view the objectives of the organization.

ADVANTAGES

The formal communication has the following advantages:

(1) Maintenance of Authority of the Officers:

Formal communication maintains constant relations among the superiors and the subordinates as a result of whom the dignity of the line superiors is maintained. Consequently, it is convenient to control the subordinates and fix their responsibility which is absolutely needed for effective and successful control.

(2) Clear and Effective Communication:

In formal communication, there is a direct contact among the managers and the subordinates. Both understand the capability, habits, feelings, etc. of one another. Managers know as to when and under which conditions their subordinates need information. In this way, this communication is capable of making available timely information. Hence, it is clear and effective.

(3) Orderly Flow of Information:

The information has to pass through a definite route from one person to another. Hence, the flow of information is systematic.

(4) Easy Knowledge of Source of Information:

In this type of communication, the source of each information can be easily located.

LIMITATIONS

Following are the disadvantages or limitations of the formal communication:

(1) Overload of Work:

In a modern business organization much information, many messages and other things have to be communicated. Under formal communication, they are routed through a definite channel and this consumes much of the time of the superiors and thus some other important works are left unattended.

(2) Distortion of Information:

This method can be a hindrance in the flow of information. Sometimes the distance between the sender and the receiver is so big that the information has to pass through many hands and by the time it reaches the receiver it is distorted. Thus it fails to serve its purpose.

(3) Indifferent Officers:

The officers do not pay much attention to the suggestions and complaints of the subordinates. In such a case a subordinate may come lose his faith in the effectiveness of communication.

TYPES OF FORMAL COMMUNICATION (CHANNELS OF COMMUNICATION)

Formal communication is of two types:

(1) Vertical Communication:

(i) Downward Communication

(ii) Upward Communication

(2) Horizontal Communication.

(1) Vertical Communication

Vertical communication is of the following two types:

(i) Downward Communication:

The communication by top hierarchy with their subordinates is called downward communication.

This communication includes orders, rules, information, policies, instructions, etc. The chief advantage of the downward communication is that the subordinates get useful timely information which helps them in their work performance,

(ii) Upward Communication:

This is quite the reverse of the downward communication. This flows from the subordinates to the superiors. The subject-matter of this communication includes suggestions, reactions, reports, complaints, etc. This sort of communication helps the superiors in taking decisions.

(2) Horizontal Communication

Horizontal communication takes place when two individuals of the same level exchange information. Horizontal communication is used by the same level officers to solve the problems of similar nature and profit by the experience of other people. The subject-matter of horizontal communication includes information, requests, suggestions, mutual problems and coordination related information.

FORMAL COMMUNICATION NETWORK

The way in which formal communication is done, is known as formal communication network.

Formal communication can be done in different ways-it may be vertical communication or horizontal communication. The different forms of formal communication network have been shown in the following diagram:

(1) Chain Communication:

Chain communication refers to the communication between a superior and a subordinate. All the people in an organisation from top to bottom are linked with the help of a scalar chain as has been shown in diagram (1). A is placed at the highest rank, B is a subordinate of A, C is the subordinate of B, D is the subordinate of C and E is the subordinate of D.

(2) Wheel Communication:

In this form of communication, all the subordinates of a superior talk to one another through his medium. The superior works as a hub of a wheel. In the diagram (2), A is the superior and B, C, D and E are the subordinates. All the four subordinates communicate through the medium of A.

(3) Circular Communication:

This communication takes place among the members of a group. Every member of a group can communicate with the nearest two members. In the diagram (3), A can have communication with B and E. Similarly, B can have communication with A and C. The same applies to all the members of the group. In this case the communication moves at a slow speed.

(4) Free Flow Communication:

This form of communication also takes place among the different members of the group. Its special feature is that every member of the group can talk to all the other people in the group.

This has been clarified in diagram (4). A can talk directly to B, C, D, E. In the same way B can talk directly to A, C, D, and E. The same applies to all the members of the group. In this case, the communication moves at a rapid pace.

(5) Inverted 'V' Communication:

In this form of communication, a subordinate is permitted to communicate with the boss of his boss. In this form of communication the messages move at a rapid speed, in the diagram (5), C and D are the subordinate of B who, in turn, is a subordinate of A. Here C and D can talk directly to A who happens to be the boss of B.

INFORMAL COMMUNICATION

It refers to interchange of information unofficially. This communication is based on informal relations (like friendship, membership of the same club, the same place of birth, etc.) and, therefore, is free from all the organizational formalities.

The exchange of informal messages usually takes place on the occasion of community meals, social occasions, parties, etc. On such occasions, the superiors gather such information from their subordinates as may be difficult to get through formal communication. Such communication includes comments, suggestions, etc.

Under this, communication takes place through gesticulation, moving of head, smiling and by remaining quiet. For example, a superior wants to complain against his subordinate to his higher officer and at the same time he is afraid of giving it in writing. This can be conveyed to the higher officer through informal communication, say during the course of a conversation.

Informal communication is also called grapevine communication because there is no definite channel of communication. Under it some information passes through many individuals and covers a long distance making its origin obscure. This is exactly like a grapevine where it is difficult to find the beginning and the end.

CHARACTERISTICS

Informal or grapevine communication has the following characteristics:

(1) Formation through Social Relations:

This communication is born out of social relations who mean that it is beyond the restrictions of the organisation. No superior-subordinate relationship figures therein. A more sociable superior can gather much information through this channel.

(2) Two types of Information:

Through this communication, information about the work and the individual can be collected.

(3) Uncertain Path:

Since it is beyond the restrictions of the organisation, it follows no definite channel. Like a grapevine, it moves in a zigzag manner.

(4) Possibility of Rumour and Distortion:

Responsibility for the true or false nature of communication does not lie on any individual and, therefore, not much attention is paid to its meaning while communicating. Consequently, the rumours keep floating.

(5) Quick Relay:

Informal communication makes news spread like wildfire. Not only this, people start adding something of their own which sometimes changes the real meaning of the communication.

ADVANTAGES

The informal channel of communication has the following advantages:

(1) Fast and Effective Communication:

Under this communication, the messages move fast and their effect is equally great on the people.

(2) Free Environment:

Informal communication is done in a free environment. Free environment means that there is no pressure of any office-big or small. The reactions of the employees can easily be collected.

(3) Better Human Relations:

Informal communication saves the employees from tension. Freedom from tension helps the establishment of better human relations. This also affects the formal communication.

(4) Easy Solution of the Difficult Problems:

There are many problems which cannot be solved with the help of formal communication. There is more freedom in informal communication which helps the solution of difficult problems.

(5) Satisfying the Social Needs of the Workers:

Everybody wants good relations with the high officers at the place of his work. Such relations give satisfaction to the employees and they feel proud. But this can be possible only with the help of the informal communication.

LIMITATIONS

The defects or limitations of the informal communication are as under:

(1) Unsystematic Communication:

This communication is absolutely unsystematic and it is not necessary that information reaches the person concerned.

(2) Unreliable Information:

Most of the information received through this communication is undependable and no important decision can be taken on its basis.

Difference between Formal and Informal Communication

1. Formal communication is communication that takes place through the formal official channels.

Whereas informal communication is communication that takes place by passing the formal channels

2. Formal Communication is not flexible but Informal communication is flexible.

3. Formal communication is totally controlled by the management. On other hand informal communication cannot be controlled by the management.

4. Informal communication has documentary evidence. Informal communication has no documentary evidence.

5. In Formal communication official discipline is strictly maintained, but in informal communication Official decorum and discipline are not followed.

6. In case of formal communication secrecy can be maintained. Here in informal communication maintaining secrecy is very difficult.

7. Formal communication is time consuming. But in case of informal communication Less time is taken for transmitting information.

8. Formal communication is expensive where as informal communication is less expensive than formal communication.

9. In case of formal communication, there is almost no chance of misunderstanding. In informal communication due to lack of control misunderstanding can takes place.

10. In formal communication official discipline is maintained chance of mistakes is very low. On the other hand, in case of informal communication strict rules are not followed, there for possibility of mistakes is very high.

BUSINESS WRITING PRINCIPLES OR SEVEN C'S IN BUSINESS COMMUNICATION

1. Correctness:

Normally it is assumed that correctness only refers to spelling, punctuation and grammar etc. but business Communication is something more than that. Following guideline should be considered for achieving correctness.

- Use the correct level of language
- Include only accurate facts and figures.
- Maintain acceptable writing mechanics.

(a) Use the Correct Level of Language:

There are usually three levels of language that is formal, informal and sub-standard. Informal level of language is the language of business letters, memos and reports. Formal language is used for writing research papers and legal documents etc. Sub-standard level of language is not used in any type of communication because it either refers to the street language or unacceptable language.

(b) Include Only Accurate Facts and Figures:

The writer of a business message should specifically be careful when he is quoting any fact or figure. The situation is more critical when the reader relies on the accuracy of facts and figures. An incorrect figure may lead even to the loss of customer, because customer might feel that he is not dealing with business like people. For example if a bank manager provides a wrong balance figure to his account holder, the result might be disastrous for the bank.

(c) Maintain Acceptable Writing Mechanics:

Writing mechanics include a number of considerations. For instance, use of grammar rules, Sentences structure, composition, punctuation, spelling and all other considerations.

2. Conciseness:

With the advent of information revolution, business messages are getting short day by day. This is because of huge inflow and outflow of messages on daily basis. Therefore, conciseness is a prime requirement. Following points should be considered for achieving conciseness. Omitting trite expressions. Avoid unnecessary repetition. Include relevant facts.

(a) Omitting Trite Expressions:

Trite expressions are also called clichés or stereo typed expressions. They are usually longer, formal and relatively meaningless because of over use.

Example:

Trite: In accordance with your request of recent date, we are enclosing herewith our cashier's cheque in the amount of Rs 20,000, representing a withdrawal of said saving A/c. No. 3595.

Improved: According to your request of April 25, cheque of Rs. 20,000 is enclosed.

(b) Avoid Unnecessary Repetition:

Skilful business writers avoid unnecessary repetition by rewording their message and trying to reduce it by almost 50%. In other words first draft of the message is never final and it always requires a second reworded reduced draft before dispatched to the receiver.

Example:

Wordy: I have your letter of October 14 and wish to say that we will be glad to give you a refund for shirt you purchased here last week.

Improved: You can avail refund for the shirt you purchased last week.

(c) Include Relevant Facts: Relevant facts refer to those necessary facts which should be present and should never be compromised for achieving conciseness.

3. Clarity:

Clarity refers to a clear understanding of the message by the receiver. In other words the receiver should not face any problem in getting the meaning of the message. The clarity could be achieved by the following techniques.

Choose words that are short, familiar and conversational. Construct effective sentences and paragraphs. Achieve appropriate readability. Include examples, illustrations etc.

(a) Choose Words that are Short, Familiar and Conversational:

The vocabulary of English language is so rich that a number of words are possible for a single occasion. In today's business English, analysts suggest that it's better to use such words in business writing, which are normally used in day to day conversation. Therefore, it is always better to avoid difficult and high sounding words.

Example:

The bank statement shows an Overdraft of Rs. 10,000. The bank statement shows an excess withdrawal of Rs. 10,000.

(b) Construct Effective Sentences and Paragraphs:

The number of paragraphs for a business message should not exceed more than 3-4 paragraphs. Within one paragraph, number of sentences should not exceed more than 3-4 sentences and within one sentence, number of words should not exceed more than 12-15 words.

(c) Include Examples, Illustrations etc.:

Examples and illustrations work as supplementary tools for the writer. Examples help the reader to understand meaning of the message.

4. Completeness:

It is not necessary that all seven C's could be applied to all types of business messages. The 'C' of completeness should be kept in mind especially giving replies to inquiries and writing adjustment letter. Following points are considered for the 'C' of completeness.

- Answer all questions asked.
- Give something extra when desirable.
- Check for five W's.

(a) Answer all Questions Asked:

If in the product related inquiry the prospective customer has asked four questions, it is much necessary to answer all the four questions. Even if a single question is missed and not answered, the inquirer is having all the reasons to believe that the person giving reply is a careless person or he is not interested in answering the questions or there is something wrong which he is willing to hide.

(b) Give Something Extra When Desirable:

Normally a good marketing technique applied by managers is to offer something extra apart from original questions asked. This something extra may be the point of sale for the producer because customer would like to buy from such a manufacturer who is offering something extra, which others are not offering.

(c) Check for 5 W's:

Five W's to Who, What, When, Where and Why. For example to order merchandise, we should make clear What we want, When we need it, Where it is to be sent, How the payment will be needed.

5. Concreteness:

Concreteness adds conviction to the message. It is easy for the reader to believe on concrete messages. Concreteness also increases credibility of the sender of message. Following points should be considered for achieving concreteness.

- Use specific facts and figures.
- Put action in the verb.
- Choose vivid image building words.

(a) Use Specific Facts and Figures:

Use of fact and figures play a vital role especially when describing a product or service.

Example:

General: These brakes stop car within short distance.

Specific: The hydraulic pressure brakes stop a car with a distance of two feet as soon as they are applied.

(b) Put Action in the Verb: The basic function of the verb is to describe action of a noun or pronoun. Therefore, care should be taken that the action should always be represented by verb and an action is found in a noun, it should be converted into verb.

Example:

Noun: They held meeting in the office.

Verb: They met in the office.

(c) Choose Vivid Image Building Words:

Vivid image building words are generally used for creating an impression upon the reader, so that the reader should start building an image of the product or service in his mind. Such words are used in sales and sales promotion letters.

Example: This is a very good computer.

The P-IV 800 MHz, 20GB HD, 64MB RAM, 500 MB CACHE, Intel genuine processor, in ATX casing is a computer of new millennium.

6. Consideration:

Consideration refers to giving importance to the other person whether he is a reader audience, spectator or listener. For achieving consideration following points are considered.

- You attitude
- Show readers interest
- Apply integrity in the message
- Emphasize the positive

(a) You Attitude:

You attitude means writing a business message from the point of view of the customer or at least showing that the customer is very important.

Example:

I - Attitude: We allow 5% discount on Cash Payment.

You - Attitude: You can enjoy 5% discount on Cash Payment.

(b) Show Readers Interest:

People are basically selfish in their nature. They are only interested in themselves and they always look for some material benefit. Therefore business messages should always be drafted in such a manner to offer something to the customer, which is of interest for him. Mind it customers are not interested in the producer or service provider. Their focus of concentration is their own self. A customer will be a loyal customer, if he is obtaining some benefit on a regular basis.

(c) Apply Integrity in the Message:

Integrity refers to character in the business message. This would come by being honest and truthful with the customer. Never make such a promise, which can be fulfilled never give false hopes to the customer and also never bluff the customer.

(d) Emphasize the Positive: Most of the statements even in business messages could be written from angles. One is the positive angle and the other is the negative one. It is always better to highlight positively rather than negatively.

Example:

Negative: We do not refund if the refund item is soiled and unsalable.

Positive: We do refund if the returned item is clean and saleable.

7. Courtesy:

Surviving in today's business world requires courtesy on the part of producer or seller. A discourteous producer or service provider cannot succeed in the buyer's market. That is why famous slogan of 'Customer is always right' invented. To achieve courtesy following points should be considered.

- Be tactful.
- Omit expressions that can irritate.
- Answer/mail promptly.
- Grant and apologize.

(a) Be Tactful:

Tact means handling customer with a right technique. Otherwise, if customers are not handled properly, business may suffer.

Example:

Tactless: Your letter is not complete I cannot understand it.

Tactful: If I understand your letter correctly, you want to say that.....

(b) Omit Expressions that Can Irritate:

Irritating expressions are disliked by all and customers are not any exception.

Example:

You have failed

You have no choice

You neglect

(c) Answer / Mail Promptly:

It is a matter of business courtesy that all mails should be answered promptly. A late reply may give an impression that the manufacturer is not interested in the customer.

(d) Grand and Apologize:

It is always advisable to give some favour to the customer if he asked for it, and if some mistake is committed, it is better to apologize.

ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATION CHANNELS

Electronic channels range from the electronic mail (email) to television and from the telephone to videoconferencing. When Samuel Morse invented the telegraph in 1835, no one imagined that electronic communication systems would have such a pervasive impact on the way people send and receive information. In general, electronic channels serve as transducers for written and oral communication. A fax machine, for example, converts text and graphic information into electronic signals to transmit them to another fax machine, where they are converted back into text and graphic images. Likewise, television converts oral and visual images into electronic signals for sending and then back into oral and visual images at the receiver's end.

Communication using electronic media known as electronic communication. Such communication allows transmission of message or information using computer systems, fax machine, e-mail, tele or video conferencing and satellite network. People can easily share conversation, picture, image, sound, graphics, maps, interactive software and thousands of things for the development of electronic communication. Due to electronic technology, jobs, working locations and cultures are changing and therefore people can easily access to worldwide communication without any physical movement.

L.C. Bovee and Others said, “Electronic communication is the transmission of information using advanced techniques such as computer moderns, facsimile machines, voice mail, electronic mail, teleconferencing, video cassettes, and private television networks.”

Electronic channels usually have the same basic characteristics as the other channels, but electronic media exert their own influence. The most obvious of these are speed and reach. Electronic channels cover more distance more quickly than is possible with traditional means of conveying information. The speed and reach of electronic channels create new expectations for both sender and receiver, and while the fundamental characteristics of oral and written communication remain, the perceptions of electronic messages are different from those of their traditional equivalents.

The advent of electronic communication channels created an awareness of whether communication was synchronous or asynchronous. Synchronous communication requires both the sender and the receiver to be available at the same time. Face-to-face meetings, telephone conversations, “live” radio and television (most talk shows, sporting events, and anything else not pre-recorded), videoconferencing, and electronic “chat rooms” are all examples of synchronous communication.

Letters and other printed documents, electronic mail, electronic conferences, voice mail, and prerecorded video are all examples of asynchronous communication.

The advantages of synchronous communication are based on the immediacy of feedback. Because both sender and receiver are present at the same time (even if their locations are different), the receiver usually has the opportunity to comment on a message while it is being sent. The exceptions are, of course, with one-way media, such as radio and TV. The principal disadvantage of synchronous communication is the need to have sender and receiver present at the same time. A meeting or phone call may be convenient for one person but not for another. This is especially true when the people involved are from different time zones.

The advantages of asynchronous communication are that messages can be sent and received when convenient for sender and receiver. Also, because asynchronous communication requires a methodology for storing and forwarding messages, it automatically provides a relatively permanent record of the communication. The principal disadvantage of asynchronous communication is that feedback is delayed and may be difficult to obtain.

1. Telephone

The telephone was the first electronic channel to gain wide acceptance for business use. Telephones are everywhere—at least in the industrialized world. The telephone offers many advantages. It is often the fastest, most convenient means of communicating with someone. The telephone is also economical in comparison with the cost of writing and sending a letter or the travel involved in face-to-face meetings. Although standard telephone equipment limits sender and receiver to exchanging vocal information, tone of voice, rate of speech, and other vocal qualities help sender and receiver understand each other’s messages.

Modern telephone services expand the utility of the telephone through answering machines and voice mail, telephone conferencing, portable phones, pagers, and other devices designed to extend the speed and reach of the telephone as a communication device.

The telephone does have disadvantages. The most common complaint about the telephone is telephone tag. It means that while we try to call a person over telephone, that other person is not available to attend that call. Telephone tag is time consuming, expensive, and—if it goes on long enough—irritating.

Telephones can also be intrusive. Senders place calls when it is convenient for them to do so, but the time may not be especially convenient for the receiver. This is especially true when the person placing the call and the one receiving it are in different time zones, perhaps even on different continents. Another disadvantage of the telephone is that they are so common that people assume that everyone is skilled in their use, when this is actually far from the case. Most people have had little or no training in effective telephone skills and are poorly prepared to discuss issues or leave effective voice mail messages when the person with whom they wish to speak is not available.

2. Radio

Although its business uses are limited, radio is an effective means of broadcasting information to many people at once. For this reason, radio is a form of mass communication. The mass media also include newspapers, popular magazines, and television. Radio and other forms of mass communication do not allow for convenient, prompt feedback. Receivers who wish to provide feedback on a particular message typically need to use some other communication channel—telephone, email, or letter—to respond to a sender. The most common business use of radio is for advertising, primarily at the local level.

The advantages of radio are that it is a relatively inexpensive medium for both sender and receiver, and vocal qualities can be used to help clarify the meaning of messages. Radio messages may be pre-recorded for a later broadcast, and receivers may record messages to listen to them at a more convenient time or for repeated play. The disadvantages are the absence of a convenient means of feedback and the use of radio to provide background entertainment, which leads receivers to pay less attention to information delivered by radio than to that delivered by other means.

3. Television

Television, another of the mass media, is also an effective means of broadcasting information to many people at once. In addition to using commercial television for advertising, business has been making increasing use of TV for education and training programs and videoconferencing. Because it combines auditory and visual images, TV provides a fairly effective substitute for face-to-face communication when time, distance, or cost of travel would make face-to-face communication difficult.

The advantages of television—video—are that it combines both audio and visual information in a way that approximates face-to-face communication. Receivers can see facial expressions and other nonverbal signals as well as hear tone of voice, rate of speech, and other paralinguistic elements that contribute to the interpretation of the verbal message. Messages may be pre-recorded and checked to ensure that they communicate the intended message before delivery at a later time. They can also be recorded by the receivers for viewing at a convenient time or viewing repeatedly to ensure that the message has been understood.

The principal disadvantage of television is that it is expensive, especially when it is done well. Videoconferencing rooms, which serve to send and receive video images of meetings, are sufficiently expensive that typically only large organizations have them. Organizations that have installed videoconferencing rooms use them to avoid the costs of travel. In recent years, the cost of such equipment has been coming down, and inexpensive desktop-to-desktop video designed for use with computers connected to the Internet have become available.

Recording and broadcasting equipment are expensive. Recording, duplicating, and distributing videotapes (or DVD disks) is also expensive, so the message needs to be important to the organization and to those whom it wishes to reach. Training videos, for example, are produced to show members of an organization how to perform a specific task. Once produced, they can be shown to hundreds and perhaps thousands of people, which keeps the “cost per view” at an acceptable level. Television is also difficult to do well. Broadcast quality video requires good cameras, trained operators, and usually a trained producer. Those who will be on camera require sufficient training to be comfortable speaking to the camera lens, which has been called “the eye that never blinks.”

4. Electronic Mail

Email has recently become the most common form of business communication, substituting for letters, memos, and many telephone calls. It is quick, convenient, and—once the appropriate hardware and software are installed—inexpensive. Most organizations in the industrialized world now have email and access to the Internet, a world-wide network connecting most of the world’s major computer networks. Although email permits most of the advantages of other forms of written communication, email users tend to prepare email messages quickly and with less attention to detail, including grammatical and mechanical correctness, than they do when preparing paper documents.

The advantages of email are that it is both quick and convenient. It can be printed, saved electronically, or forwarded to multiple recipients. Email lists—whether maintained by an individual or by special software designed for the purpose (such as listserv, listproc, and majordomo)—simplify the process of exchanging information with groups of people who share common interests.

The disadvantages of email are that because speed often seems more important than correctness, email messages often contain egregious errors in spelling, grammar, mechanics and content. Messages containing such errors may be saved or forwarded and/or printed, duplicated, and sent to a number of people. If such a message were sent to a large mailing list, hundreds or perhaps thousands of people would see it and form an opinion about the person who sent it.

5. Electronic Conferencing

Although mailing lists enable large numbers of people to participate in discussions about issues of common interest, they are not well-suited to organizing that information in a logical way. Messages are sent and received in chronological order rather than by topic. Also, even though mailing lists store or archive messages, retrieving information about a particular topic from the archives may not be easy. Electronic conferences eliminate those problems by categorizing subjects by topics or threads. Access to such conferences can also be easily restricted to qualified individuals, making them useful for discussions of proprietary matters.

Individuals who belong to an electronic discussion group can read about and respond to the subjects of most interest to them and skip those in which they have no interest. Someone who joins an existing electronic conference can review everything that has been said about a particular subject without reading the comments about irrelevant subjects.

The principal advantages of electronic conferences are that the information is categorized by topic and the channel is asynchronous, allowing sender and receiver to access the information when convenient.

The principal disadvantages of electronic conferences are that they require deliberate access. Whereas messages from an email list arrive in a person's mailbox automatically, he or she must deliberately access an electronic conference to see what new topics or responses have been added since his or her last access. If the person forgets to access the conference regularly, he or she might miss an important message. Also, those posting responses to items on the conference may not stick to the subject of the item. Such deviation from the topic is usually called drift, and if the amount of drift on a conference is significant, the usefulness of the conference is diminished.

6. Web-based Communication

Since its inception in 1992, the portion of the Internet known as the World Wide Web—or more simply as the Web—has grown at virtually an exponential rate. Most organizations of any size and thousands of individuals have Web sites, which consist of one or more pages of information. One of the reasons that the Web has grown at such a phenomenal rate is that it provides many of the advantages of the other communication channels with very few of their disadvantages.

Information presented on the Web can include text, graphics, sound, and video. It can be prepared quickly or carefully, depending on the purpose of and audience for the message. It can also allow for immediate feedback by providing email addresses or special forms for feedback on specific topics. Web sites can be designed for access by anyone with an Internet connection or for a limited audience on an organization-specific Intranet.

Materials for the Web use a special computer programming language known as Hypertext Markup Language, or HTML, for formatting text and graphics for online readability. The inclusion of feedback forms and other types of interactivity requires additional software. While programs, such as Microsoft's FrontPage and Netscape's Composer, can help individuals prepare acceptable Web pages, effective Web site design and management usually requires special training.

The advantages of the Web as a communication channel is that Web pages can communicate quickly using text, graphics (including animated graphics), sound, and video with anyone with an Internet account and allow for immediate feedback. Web page authors have considerable control over the appearance of their material using HTML and other programming languages.

The principal disadvantage of using the Web to communicate is that the receiver must want the information badly enough to look for it. Most communication channels allow the sender to initiate the process, perhaps even at times inconvenient for the receiver. To communicate on the Web, however, the sender places the information on a Web site and then must wait for the appropriate receivers to access it. Another disadvantage is that the sender forfeits some control over the appearance of a Web-based document. Receivers have the option of choosing not only when they access the information but the appearance of the document as well. Receivers can, for example, choose to view or print the document using a typeface and/or type size different from the one selected by the author.

An additional disadvantage of Web-based communication is that the same information will display differently depending on the computer platform, the size of the monitor, and the Web browser being used. For this reason, Web designers need to test materials on common computer systems and with different Web browsers.

Communication using electronic media known as electronic communication. Such communication allows transmission of message or information using computer systems, fax machine, e-mail, tele or video conferencing and satellite network. People can easily share conversation, picture, image, sound, graphics, maps, interactive software and thousands of things for the development of electronic communication. Due to electronic technology, jobs, working locations and cultures are changing and therefore people can easily access to worldwide communication without any physical movement.

L.C. Bovee and Others said, “Electronic communication is the transmission of information using advanced techniques such as computer moderns, facsimile machines, voice mail, electronic mail, teleconferencing, video cassettes, and private television networks.”

ADVANTAGES OF ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATION

The following points highlight on the advantages of electronic communication:

- 1. Speedy transmission: It requires only few seconds to communicate through electronic media because it supports quick transmission.
- 2. Wide coverage: World has become a global village and communication around the globe requires a second only.
- 3. Low cost: Electronic communication saves time and money. For example Text sms is cheaper than traditional letter.
- 4. Exchange of feedback: Electronic communication allows instant exchange of feedback. So communication becomes perfect using electronic media.
- 5. Managing global operation: Due to advancement of electronic media, business managers can easily control operation across the globe. Video or tele- conferencing e-mail and mobile communication are helping managers in this regard.

DISADVANTAGES OF ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATION

Electronic communication is not free from the below limitations:

- 1. Volume of data: The volume of tele-communication information is increasing in such a fast rate that business people are unable to absorb it within relevant time limit.
- 2. Cost of development: Electronic communication requires huge investment for infrastructural development. Frequent change in technology also demands for further investment.
- 3. Legal status: Data or information, if faxed, may be distorted and will cause zero value in the eye of law.
- 4. Undelivered data: Data may not be retrieved due to system error or fault with the technology. Hence required service will be delayed.
- 5. Dependency: Technology is changing everyday and therefore poor countries face problem as they cannot afford new or advanced technology. Therefore poor countries need to be dependent towards developed countries for sharing global network.

SYLLABUS

Unit II Business Correspondence: Letter Writing, presentation, Inviting quotations, Sending quotations, Placing orders, Inviting tenders, Sales letters, claim & adjustment letters and social correspondence, Memorandum, Inter -office Memo, Notices, Agenda, Minutes, Application letters, Preparation of resume

BUSINESS CORRESPONDENCE

Communication through exchange of letters is known as correspondence. We communicate our feelings, thoughts etc. to our friends and relatives through letters that may be called personal correspondence. A Businessman also writes and receives letters in his day-to-day transactions, which may be called business correspondence. Business correspondence or business letter is a written communication between two parties. Businessmen may write letters to supplier of goods and also receive letters from the suppliers. Customers may write letters to businessmen seeking information about availability of goods, price, quality, sample etc. or place order for purchase of goods. Thus, business letters may be defined as a media or means through which views are expressed and ideas or information is communicated in writing in the process of business activities

DEFINITION

“Business correspondence means the exchange of information in a written format for the process of business activities. Business correspondence can take place between organizations, within organizations or between the customers and the organization. The correspondence is generally of widely accepted formats that are followed universally”.

NEED FOR WRITTEN COMMUNICATION

1. Maintaining a proper relationship.
2. Serves as evidence.
3. Create and maintain goodwill.
4. Inexpensive and convenient.
5. Formal communication.
6. Independent of interpersonal skills

IMPORTANCE OF BUSINESS CORRESPONDENCE

Now-a-days business operations are not restricted to any locality, state or nation. Today production takes place in one area but consumption takes place everywhere. Since the businessmen as well as customers live in far off places they don't have sufficient time to contact each other personally. Thus, there arises the need for writing letters. In the past the situation was not so. Business letters were not essential in olden days. But now the importance of letters has increased because of vast expansion of business, increase in demand as well as supply of goods. Let us learn about the importance of business letters.

i) Help in maintaining proper relationship

Now-a-days business activities are not confined to any one area or locality. The businessmen as well as customers are scattered throughout the country. Thus, there is a need to maintain proper relationship among them by using appropriate means of communication. Here business letters play an important role. The customers can write letters to the businessman seeking information about products and businessmen also supply various information to customers. This helps them to carry on business on national and international basis.

ii) Inexpensive and convenient mode

Though there are other modes of communication like telephone, telex, fax, etc. but business information can be provided and obtained economically and conveniently through letters.

iii) Create and maintain goodwill

Sometimes business letters are written to create and enhance goodwill. Businessmen at times send letters to enquire about complaints and suggestions of their customers. They also send letters to inform the customers about the availability of a new product, clearance sale etc. All this results in cordial relations with the customers, which enhances the goodwill of the business.

iv) Serves as evidence

We cannot expect a trader to memorise all facts and figures in a conversation that normally takes place among businessmen. Through letters, he can keep a record of all facts. Thus, letters can serve as evidence in case of dispute between two parties.

v) Help in expansion of business

Business requires information regarding competing products, prevailing prices, promotion, market activities, etc. If the trader has to run from place to place to get information, he will end up doing nothing. It will simply result in loss of time. But through business letters, he can make all enquiries about the products and the markets. He can also receive orders from different countries and, thus enhance sales.

ESSENTIAL QUALITIES OF A GOOD BUSINESS LETTER

A letter should serve the purpose for which it is written. If a businessman writes a letter to the supplier for purchase of goods, the letter should contain all the relevant information relating to the product, mode of payment, packaging, transportation of goods, etc. clearly and specifically. Otherwise, there will be confusion that may cause delay in getting the goods. Again the quality of paper used in the letter, its size, colour etc. also need special attention, because it creates a positive impression in the mind of the receiver. We may classify the qualities of a good business letter as: a. Inner Qualities; and b. Outer Qualities

a) Inner Qualities

The inner qualities of a good business letter refer to the quality of language, its presentation, etc. These facilitate quick processing of the request and that leads to prompt action. Let us discuss the various inner qualities of a good business letter.

(i) Simplicity - Simple and easy language should be used for writing business letters. Difficult words should be strictly avoided, as one cannot expect the reader to refer to the dictionary every time while reading letter.

(ii) Clarity - The language should be clear, so that the receiver will understand the Business Studies message immediately, easily and correctly. Ambiguous language creates confusion. The letter will serve the purpose if the receiver understands it in the same manner in which it is intended by the sender.

(iii) Accuracy - The statements written in the letter should be accurate to, the best of the sender's knowledge. Accuracy demands that there are no errors in the usage of language - in grammar, spellings, punctuations etc. An accurate letter is always appreciated.

(iv) Completeness - A complete letter is one that provides all necessary information to the users. For example, while sending an order we should mention the desirable features of the goods, i.e., their quality, shape, colour, design, quantity, date of delivery, mode of transportation, etc.

(v) Relevance - The letter should contain only essential information. Irrelevant information should not be mentioned while sending any business correspondence.

(vi) Courtesy - Courtesy wins the heart of the reader. In business letters, courtesy can be shown/expressed by using words like please, thank you, etc.

(vii) Neatness - A neat letter is always impressive. A letter either handwritten or typed, should be neat and attractive in appearance. Overwriting and cuttings should be avoided.

b) Outer Qualities

The outer qualities of a good business letter refers to the appearance of the letter. It includes the quality of paper used, colour of the paper, size of the paper etc. Good quality paper gives a favourable impression in the mind of the reader. It also helps in documenting the letters properly. Let us discuss the various outer qualities of a good business letter.

(i) Quality of paper - The paper used should be in accordance with the economic status of the firm. Now-a-days the cost of the paper is very high. Therefore, good paper should be used for original copy and ordinary paper may be used for duplicate copy.

(ii) Colour of the Paper - It is better to use different colours for different types of letters, so that the receiver will identify the letters quickly and prompt action can be taken.

(iii) Size of the paper - Standard size paper (A4) should be used while writing business letters. The size of the paper should be in accordance with the envelopes available in the market.

(iv) Folding of letter - The letter should be folded properly and uniformly. Care should be taken to give minimum folds to the letter so that it will fit the size of the envelope. If window envelope is used then folding should be done in such a way that the address of the receiver is clearly visible through the transparent part of the envelope.

(v) Envelope - The size and quality of the envelope also need special attention. The size of the letter should fit the size of the letters. The business firms use different types of envelopes i.e., ordinary envelope, window envelope, laminated envelope Business Correspondence 159 etc. In window envelope there is no need to write the address of the receiver separately on the envelope. It is clearly visible through the transparent part on the face of the envelope, which may be called as window. In laminated envelope a thin plastic sheet or cloth is pasted on the inner side that gives extra protection to letters from being damaged during transit.

PARTS OF A BUSINESS LETTER

The quality will be maintained if we give proper attention to each and every part of the letter. The essential parts of a business letter are as follows:

1. Heading -The heading of a business letter usually contains the name and postal address of the business, E-mail address, Web-site address, Telephone Number, Fax Number, Trade Mark or logo of the business (if any)

SALES LETTERS

The market keeps fluctuating based on many factors such as economy, inflation, etc. This fluctuation makes the market either a sellers market or a buyers market. If it is a sellers market then companies have nothing to worry, as customers will hunt for them. But if it is a buyers market, companies need to be on their toes always to beat competition.

A Sales Prospecting Letter is a tool in the hands of the seller to bring about awareness of the very existence of the company as well as its wide range of products. This letter views all customers as prospects who, at some point in time, will use or buy the products of the company prospecting them for.

DOS AND DON'T'S OF SALES PROSPECTING LETTER

- A Sales Prospecting Letter should primarily talk about a product in the light of the customer's need
- It should give all the aspects of a product, positive as well as not so positive in the light of the other competitive products
- A Sales Prospecting Letter should in the first paragraph give an introduction to the company launching the product
- The next paragraph should talk about the range of products the company has to offer
- The following paragraph should then start talking about the one product that is being promoted
- The second last paragraph is the one that gives the salient features of the product being talked about
- The last paragraph in the letter should leave a number or email address to which the reader may be asked to write in case of any queries
- How will the product benefit the reader should be an integral part of the letter

- A Sales Prospecting Letter should not aim at demeaning the other companies offering similar products, as that is totally against the business ethics
- This letter should preferably be sent in the names of individual prospective customers rather than a generic one to give it that personal touch
- A Sales Prospecting Letter should be checked for any grammatical or punctuation errors
- Since this is the first point of contact between the prospective customer and the company, the tone of the letter should never be dictatorial
- The language of the letter should be simple to understand
- A typed Sales Prospecting Letter is always a better option than a hand-written one primarily because if the writing is not easy to read then it may put off the prospective customer
- Since this is a letter where an order may be given at the time of reading the letter itself, an order/service form with a pre-paid envelope should also be sent with the letter
- Any offers that are being given by the company should also be given in the letter
- Transparency of communication is very important. It is better to tell everything to the prospective customer than to keep them in the dark for any issues later

SOCIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Social correspondence includes all varieties of personal writings between acquaintances. Some examples of social correspondence are personal thank you notes, invitations, letters and cards. Although social correspondence often is casual in nature, there is a proper etiquette that applies even to correspondence among friends.

Social correspondence include personal letters, notes, invitation letters, card and thank you letters.

The Social Letters which are written to relations and intimate friends should be written in an easy, conversational style. The Social letters are really of the nature of friendly chat: and, being as a rule unpremeditated and spontaneous compositions, they are informal and free-and-easy as compared with essays. Just as in friendly talks, as in friendly letters, we can touch on many subjects and in any order we like. And we can use colloquial expressions which would in formal essays be quite out of place. But this does not mean that we can be careless and slovenly in dashing off our letters. For, it is insulting to ask a friend to decipher a badly written, ill-composed and confusing scrawl.

The Social Letters which are written to relations and intimate friends should be written in an easy, conversational style. So, it must for us to take care and preserve some order in expressing our thoughts. Above all, it must be remembered that, however free-and-easy may be our style, we are as much bound by the rules of spelling, punctuation, grammar and idiom in writing a letter as we are in writing the most formal letter.

The Social Letters which are written to relations and intimate friends should be written in an easy, conversational style. Such ungrammatical expressions as “an advice, those sort of things and he met my brother and I” are not permissible both in a friendly letter and in a business letter. Mistakes in spelling, punctuation and grammar at once stamp a letter-writer as uneducated.

Forms of address:

In Social Letters to relations and intimate friends, use the proper form of address. The proper form of address is the name (without title) of the person to whom you are writing, prefixed by such qualifying terms as Dear, My Dear, Dearest etc...

For examples:

Dear Father,

Dear Mother,

Dear Brother,

Dearest Sister,

Dear Edward, My Dear Bill,

But if you are writing to an ordinary person who is much older than you are, or of superior rank, it is respectful to use a prefix like Mr., Mrs., Ms. Etc...The Social-letters which are written to relations and intimate friends should be written in an easy, conversational style.

For Example:

Dear Mr. Bill,

Dear Mrs. Bill Mary,

Students who write to their teachers should use this prefix while addressing their teachers.

AGENDA

HOW TO WRITE AN AGENDA

An organized meeting needs a well-written agenda. Don't let meeting become the over-long, inefficient slog into which so many meetings seem to devolve. By sticking to a detailed, yet flexible agenda, you can keep your meeting streamlined and focused, ensuring that you meet all of your goals for your meeting in the shortest amount of time. Whether you're looking to write your own agenda, use a template, or make the most of an agenda you already have, get started with Step 1

1. Start by giving your agenda a title. From the most beautiful literature to the driest spreadsheet, early every important document needs a title, and meeting agendas are no exception. Your title should tell the reader two things: First, that s/he is reading an agenda, and second, what topic the meeting is covering. When you've made a decision, place your title at the top of your blank document. The title doesn't have to flowery or complicated — in a business context, simple and direct titles are usually best.

- Resist the urge to use fancy or large fonts for your title. In most situations, you'll want to use a plain, dignified font like Times New Roman or Calibri and to make your title the same size as the rest of the lettering on the document (or only slightly larger). Remember, the purpose of your title is to inform readers of what they are viewing, not necessarily to amuse or distract them.

2. Include "who?", "where?", and "when?" information in the header. Following the title, meeting agendas usually have a header which can vary in detail depending upon the level of formality your workplace encourages. This header is usually located about one line below the title. Generally, in the header, you'll want to include brief factual information about the meeting that doesn't have to do with the topic being discussed. This is so that people who aren't at the meeting can tell when and where it occurred and who was there. Below are some of the things you may want to include; regardless of the information you choose, be sure to clearly label each piece of information (bolding the label text works well here):

- Date and time. These can be grouped together or in their own separate sections.
- Location. If your business has multiple locations, you may want to write the address, whereas if it has just one location, you may want to name the room you're meeting in (e.g., Conference Room #3).
- Attendees. Job titles are usually optional and not required.
- Special individuals present. These may be special guests, speakers, or meeting leaders.

3. Write a brief statement of the meeting objective(s). Meetings that don't have a clearly-defined purpose risk wasting precious time as attendees decide what to talk about. Skip a line after your header and use bolded or underlined text to label your objective section with a title like "Objective" or "Purpose", followed by a colon or a line break. Then, in a few concise and to-the-point sentences, describe the items of discussion for the meeting. Aim to write about 1-4 sentences here.

- For instance, if you're looking to write an objective statement for a budget meeting, you might use this one: "Objective: Outline key budget goals for the 2014-2015 fiscal year and discuss long-term, cost-cutting measures. Additionally, R&D Director Marcus Feldman will present the results of a recent competitiveness study."
- If you've ever written in a scientific context, think of the objective statement as the meeting abstract or executive summary. You're essentially saying, in broad strokes, what you plan to be discussed at the meeting without going into detail.

4. Write a schedule outlining the main elements of the meeting. Schedules help combat a common flaw: business meetings often run far, far too long. Skip a line after your statement of the objective(s), give your schedule a bolded or underlined title, then begin making entries that correspond to the main topics of discussion in your schedule. For ease of reading, start each entry on its own line.

- Label each entry with either the time you plan for it to begin and end or the amount of time you plan for each entry to take. Pick one system or the other and be consistent — mixing and matching looks unprofessional.

5. Allocate time in the schedule for any special guests. If any guests are coming to your meeting to discuss topics of importance, you'll want to devote a chunk of the meeting time to these people. Plan on assigning each guest a single schedule entry even if s/he has more than one topic of discussion. This way, each one will be able to organize his or her topics as s/he sees fit.

- It is best to contact the guests ahead of time to figure out how much time each one will need for their discussion topic. This helps to avoid embarrassing scheduling conflicts.

6. Leave extra time at the end of the meeting for Q&A. During this time, people can ask for clarification about confusing topics of discussion, offer their own adjunct opinions, suggest topics for future meetings, and make other comments. You can make this Q&A time explicit by including it as the final entry in your schedule or you can simply bring it up yourself after the final element of the meeting.

- If you reach the end of your meeting and no one has any additional questions to ask or comments to make, you can always end the meeting early. Many of your attendees will likely be thankful for this!

7. Optionally, provide an outline of the discussion topics. Generally, the schedule is the "meat" of the meeting agenda — the part that people will look to to guide the discussion. However, while it isn't essential to go this extra mile, providing an additional outline of key points can be a big help for meeting attendees. An outline provides attendees a reminder of the organisation of the ideas presented during the meeting, helping jog everyone's memory of the specific topics mentioned. Below is a sample of the type of outline organization you might want to employ (see How to Write an Outline for more information):

- I. High-priority Budget Items
 - A. Employee travel budget
- B. Dealership fees
 - i. Negotiating a better deal?
- C. Lobbying costs
 - II. Revenue-boosting Measures
 - A. Alternative service deals
 - i. Presenting options to customers
- ii. Soliciting feedback
 - B. Re-investment in mobile technology

8. Check the agenda for errors before distributing it. Because some attendees may end up relying heavily on the meeting agenda, it's wise proofread it for errors and completeness before giving it out. Doing so isn't just a courtesy to the attendees — it also reflects positively on your attention to detail and the respect you have for them.

- Additionally, ensuring there are no errors in your agenda can save you time and face.

MINUTES

Why meeting minutes are important

The term "minutes" since it's actually a little misleading. After all, your committee or Board doesn't want or need a record of its meeting proceedings minute by minute! But it is important to capture the essence of the meeting, including details such as: decisions made (motions made, votes, etc.)

Next steps planned identification and tracking of action items, minutes are a tangible record of the meeting for its participants and a source of information for members who were unable to attend. In some cases, meeting minutes can act as a reference point, for example: when a meeting's outcomes impact other collaborative activities or projects within the organization, minutes can serve to notify (or remind) individuals of tasks assigned to them and/or timelines

ESSENTIALLY FIVE STEPS INVOLVED WITH MEETING MINUTES:

1. Pre-planning:

- A well-planned meeting helps ensure effective meeting minutes. If the Chair and the Secretary or minutes-taker work together to ensure the agenda and meeting are well thought out, it makes minute taking much easier. For example, depending on the meeting structure and the tools you use (see Tools below), the minutes-taker could work with the Chair to create a document format that works as an agenda and minutes outline.

Meeting agenda = outline:

At the very least, it's important to get a copy of the meeting agenda and use it as a guide or outline for taking notes and preparing the minutes – with the order and numbering of items on the minutes matching those of the agenda. In addition, the agenda and/or meeting notice also provides information that will need to be included in the minutes, such as: the names of all the meeting attendees, including guests or speakers documents that are sent out with the agenda or handed out in the meeting – copies (digital or hard copy) of handouts should be stored with the meeting minutes for future reference and for sharing with those who were unable to attend the meeting (and others as determined by the meeting's Chair).

Clarifying Expectations:

When you take on a new role as minutes-taker or Secretary, be sure to ask the Chair of the committee or Board what their expectations are of your role during the meeting, as well as the type of detail he/she expects in the minutes. For example, if your Board or committee will be dealing with motions, or voting on items/issues, be clear on whether you need to offer names of those making motions, seconding, etc. If you will be dealing with this type of procedures, you (and your Chair) may want to refer to Robert's Rules of Order

2. Record taking - what should be included?

Before you start taking notes, it's important to understand the type of information you need to record at the meeting. As noted earlier, your organization may have required content and a specific format that you'll need to follow, but generally, meeting minutes usually include the following:

- Date and time of the meeting
- Names of the meeting participants and those unable to attend (e.g., "regrets")
- Acceptance or corrections/amendments to previous meeting minutes
- Decisions made about each agenda item, for example:
 1. Actions taken or agreed to be taken
 2. Next steps
 3. Voting outcomes – e.g., (if necessary, details regarding who made motions; who seconded and approved or via show of hands, etc.)
 4. Motions taken or rejected
 5. Items to be held over
 6. New business
 7. Next meeting date and time

TIPS THAT MIGHT HELP NOTE TAKING:

- Create an outline – as discussed earlier, having an outline (or template) based on the agenda makes it easy for you to simply jot down notes, decisions, etc. under each item as you go along. If you are taking notes by hand, consider including space below each item on your outline for your hand-written notes, then print these out and use this to capture minutes.
- Check-off attendees as they enter the room - if you know the meeting attendees, you can check them off as they arrive, if not have folks introduce themselves at the start of the meeting or circulate an attendance list they can check-off themselves.
- Record decisions or notes on action items in your outline as soon as they occur to be sure they are recorded accurately

- Ask for clarification if necessary – for example, if the group moves on without making a decision or an obvious conclusion, ask for clarification of the decision and/or next steps involved.
- Don't try to capture it all – you can't keep up if you try to write down the conversation verbatim, so be sure to simply (and clearly) write (or type) just the decisions, assignments, action steps, etc.
- Record it – literally, if you are concerned about being able to keep up with note taking, consider recording the meeting (e.g., on your smart phone, iPad, recording device, etc.) but be sure to let participants know they are being recording. While you don't want to use the recording to create a word-for-word transcript of the meeting, the recording can come in handy if you need clarification.

3. The Minutes Writing Process

- Once the meeting is over, it's time to pull together your notes and write the minutes. Here are some tips that might help:
- Try to write the minutes as soon after the meeting as possible while everything is fresh in your mind.
- Review your outline and if necessary, add additional notes or clarify points raised. Also check to ensure all decisions, actions and motions are clearly noted.
- Check for sufficient detail: For Board of Director's minutes, an Association Trends article (by lawyers Jefferson C. Glassie and Dorothy Deng) suggests the following for Board minutes:
 1. include a short statement of each action taken by the board and a brief explanation of the rationale for the decision
 2. when there is extensive deliberation before passing a motion, summarize the major arguments
 3. Edit to ensure brevity and clarity, so the minutes are easy to read
 4. Be objective.
 5. Write in the same tense throughout
 6. Avoid using people's names except for motions or seconds. This is a business document, not about who said what.
 7. Avoid inflammatory or personal observations. The fewer adjectives or adverbs you use, the better.
 8. If you need to refer to other documents, attach them in an appendix or indicate where they may be found. Don't rewrite their intent or try to summarize them.

4. Distributing or Sharing Meeting Minutes

- As the official "minutes-taker" or Secretary, your role may include dissemination of the minutes. However, before you share these, be sure that the Chair has reviewed and either revised and/or approved the minutes for circulation.
- Online sharing
- The method of sharing or distribution will depend on the tools that you and your organization use. Since minutes and other documentation can create a pile of paper, it's great if you can use a paperless sharing process. For example, if you are using a word processing tool (e.g., Microsoft Word) that doesn't offer online sharing, you might want to create a PDF of the document and send this and the other attachments or meeting documentation via email.

Alternately, if you are all using Google docs – for meeting invitations, agenda and additional document sharing – you can simply “share” the document with that group once it has been finalized. Committee or Board members can simply read the documents online and save a few trees!

5. Filing/Storage of Meeting Minutes

- Most committees and Boards review and either approve or amend the minutes at the beginning of the subsequent meeting. Once you’ve made any required revisions, the minutes will then need to be stored for future reference.

18. Include references if possible in a resume. If giving references, use three to five. Include atleast one lecturer, and at least one employer.
19. To stress upon the key points in a resume, put them in appropriate headings, list them vertically, and provide details.

CONTENTS OF RESUME

The usual contents of a resume are:

Heading: Name, address and telephone number of the applicant. Job title and career objectives may also be included.

Education: Academic qualifications mentioning degrees, certificates, scholarships, awards, honours, and other academic recognition received by the applicant. It should begin with the most recent information.

Experience: Listing of previous employers, job titles and period of service. Brief description of job duties and names of superior may also be included. It should also begin with the most recent information.

Personal Data: Age, height, health, marital status etc., of the applicant.

Reference: Names, titles, addresses and telephone numbers of people who will recommend the applicant for the job. These people should know about applicant's job skills, aptitude and experience.

Miscellaneous: Co-curricular activities, interests and hobbies of the applicant. Driving license, passport, domicile and national identity card number may also be mentioned if material.

Some useful tips for preparation of resume

Be brief and concise: You've got about 30 seconds to make your pitch so don't beat around the bush.

Be perfect: Proofread ruthlessly. Weed out typos and grammatical boo-boos. Double-check dates and facts. Ensure punctuation marks are correct and in their proper places.

Be active: Go for action verbs. Delete personal pronouns and articles. These will invigorate your resume and free up space for more information.

Be inviting. Your resume must look attractive to be read. Use conservative fonts like Times New Roman or Arial, at least 10 in size. Include ample white space. Organize items under section headings to give the eyes a break. Print on crisp, white paper.

APPLICATION LETTER

An application for employment, job application, or application form (often simply called an application) is a form or collection of forms that an individual seeking employment, called an applicant, must fill out as part of the process of informing an employer of the applicant's availability and desire to be employed, and persuading the employer to offer the applicant employment.

A letter of application, also known as a cover letter, is a document sent with your resume to provide additional information on your skills and experience. A letter of application typically provides detailed information on why are you qualified for the job you are applying for. Effective application letters explain the reasons for your interest in the specific organization and identify your most relevant skills or experiences. Your application letter should let the employer know what position you are applying for, why the employer should select you for an interview, and how you will follow-up.

From the employer's perspective, the application serves a number of purposes. These vary depending on the nature of the job and the preferences of the person responsible for hiring, as "each organization should have an application form that reflects its own environment". At a minimum, an application usually requires the applicant to provide information sufficient to demonstrate that he or she is legally permitted to be employed. The typical application also requires the applicant to provide information regarding relevant skills, education, and previous employment. The application itself is a minor test of the applicant's literacy, penmanship, and communication skills - a careless job applicant might disqualify themselves with a poorly filled-out application.

Contents of application letter

1. Your address and contact details
2. The date
3. The full name of the person you are writing to, and/or his/her job title 'The Personnel Manager'
4. the address of the organisation you are applying to
5. the salutation; e.g. Respected Sir/Madam
6. a subject heading; e.g. Application for the Post of Asst. Manager
7. First paragraph: 'I am writing to apply for the post of ..., which was advertised ... on (date).
8. working experience relevant to this job
9. education relevant to this job
10. descriptions of how you fulfil all the requirements in the job advert or necessary for this post
11. why you want to work for this organisation (showing your knowledge of the organisation)
12. when you are available for interview
13. Yours sincerely / faithfully
14. your signature
15. your full name
16. enclosures

Organisation of Application

- order: decide whether your education or your working experience is more useful to the employer, and put that in the second paragraph
- Write good topic sentences: start each paragraph with words that show what it is about; e.g. 'My working experience...'; 'My degree in...'; 'My leadership skills...'; 'The reason that I would like to work for your company is...'

- Write a different job application letter for each organisation that you apply to. You will need different addresses, dates, and names, and you will need to emphasise different skills, qualifications and experience depending on the requirements of the job.
- be polite and formal, but not too polite; e.g. don't use "esteemed"

A job application letter should be organized like sales letter, because it intends to sell the writer's services to the reader. The immediate purpose of a job letter is to secure an interview and the final goal is to get employment.

Solicited Job Letter:

Solicited job letter written in response to an invitation (usually advertisement) has the advantage that a vacancy exists and that the employer is anxious to fill it. Its disadvantage is that it faces competition.

Unsolicited Job Letter:

Unsolicited job letter, written to an employer who has not invited an application, does not face competition. But, possibility of non-availability of job is its disadvantage.

FUNCTIONS OF JOB APPLICATION LETTERS:

1. Attracting Attention:

Attracting attention of the employer through appropriate stationery, neat typing, proper layout, paragraphing, etc. further, the opening should not be stereotyped.

2. Creating Desire

Creating desire to engage the applicant by describing required qualifications, interest in the job and environment, and personal favorable circumstance. Because employers prefer those candidates who have the required qualifications, interest and favorable circumstances.

3. Convincing the Employer:

Convincing the employer by giving specific details of qualifications and experience, names of references, and results of aptitude and intelligence tests previously taken. Further, enclosed certificates, recommendation letters from former employers, teachers, etc. and samples of work, e.g. translations, poetry, paintings, etc., may also convince the employer.

4. Stimulating Action:

Stimulating action by making courteous, graceful and confident request for interview that may lead to the ultimate goal of the job letter – the employment.

CONSIDERATIONS OF WRITING EFFECTIVE JOB LETTERS:

1. Using appropriate stationery.
2. Neat typing with proper layout.
3. Describing qualifications, experience interest, etc.
4. Avoiding stereotyped opening.
5. Being specific, definite, courteous and graceful.
6. Giving names of references.
7. Mentioning the results of aptitude and intelligence tests previously taken.
8. Making request for interview.
9. Explaining reasons for leaving the previous job or for being unemployed, if necessary.
10. Enclosing copies of the certificates and recommendation letters.

UNIT-III- REPORT WRITING

SYLLABUS

Unit III Report Writing: Business reports, Types, Characteristics, Importance, Elements of structure, Process of writing, Order of writing, the final draft, and check lists for reports.

REPORT

Reports are documents designed to record and convey information to the reader. Reports are part of any business or organization; from credit reports to police reports, they serve to document specific information for specific audiences, goals, or functions. The type of report is often identified by its primary purpose or function, as in an accident report, a laboratory report, a sales report, or even a book report. Reports are often analytical, or involve the rational analysis of information. Sometimes they simply “report the facts” with no analysis at all, but still need to communicate the information in a clear and concise format.

Other reports summarize past events, present current data, and forecast future trends. While a report may have conclusions, propositions, or even a call to action, the demonstration of the analysis is the primary function. A sales report, for example, is not designed to make an individual sale. It is, however, supposed to report sales to date, and may forecast future sales based on previous trends. This chapter is designed to introduce you to the basics of report writing.

REPORT WRITING

REPORT ON BUSINESS COMMUNICATION

A report is a description of an event carried back to someone who was not present on the scene. It may be defined as an organized statement of facts related to a particular subject prepared after an investigation is made and presented to the interested persons. Report can be written or oral, but in most of the cases it is written.

According to R. C. Sharma and Krishna Mohan, “A report is a formal communication written for a specific purpose that includes a description of procedures followed for collection and analysis of data, their significance, the conclusions drawn from them and the recommendations, if required.”

THE OBJECTIVES OF PREPARING REPORT

The prime objective of report is to provide information about any event or object or situation to the proper persons. It helps business people to take accurate and pragmatic decisions. The purposes of Report can be mentioned as below-

- To carry business information to the concerned quarters
- To analyze the data for interpretation
- To help planning by providing factual information
- To help decision making by providing necessary information and evidence
- To reduce administrative cost by eliminating searching cost for information
- To help establish effective control system through the information on employee performance
- To help reduce and resolve organizational disputes
- To help to bring effective coordination between and among the departments
- To help to bring dynamism in the organization by supplying latest information
- To find out the reason behind a problem
- To present the findings of investigation or inquiry
- To recommend specific action to solve a problem

So, we find that report serves some important purposes. In fact it aims to provide every support to business people through providing necessary factual information.

THE IMPORTANCE OF BUSINESS REPORTS

A business report is a document that conveys specific information about your business to other individuals. Sometimes those other individuals are employees and sometime they are investors. The information it conveys may vary depending on audience, but the foundation of the communication centers around communication.

Purpose

- Business reports are written to communicate. Sometimes they are written as a means to attract investors to your organization. Business reports are also written for employees, to keep them abreast of a company's goals and achievements. Whichever audience the report is written for, the purpose is to communicate specific information about your business.

Problem Solving

- Many business reports are written to illustrate a specific problem within the company. These types of reports present a problem along with solutions to help correct the problems. This type of report is often directed at employees. An example problem that a business report may address for employees would be a situation in which the company may be looking to downsize. This affects employees. The business report might state the standing of the business and why it may be forced to downsize. The report may also enlist the help of employees to find ways to avoid the downsize.

Financial Reporting

- A business report might be written from a financial statement perspective. This type of business report will be aimed at advisers. To an extent, it can be used to inform employees about the financial standing of the company as well. A business report may be presented for this purpose at the end of each fiscal year.

Marketing Reports

- A business report can be important when setting up marketing strategies. Before entering a new market or targeting consumers, a company may write a business report that an advertising agency can use to help devise a marketing strategy. There may also be a separate report written to help obtain financing for a media push.

Business Communication

- While some smaller companies may not find themselves writing a great deal of business reports, larger companies use business reports throughout the year. A business report can be the best way a company has to communicate vital financial and background information to others.

Organized Reports

Reports vary by size, format, and function. You need to be flexible and adjust to the needs of the audience while respecting customs and guidelines. Reports are typically organized around six key elements:

1. Whom the report is about and/or prepared for
2. What was done, what problems were addressed, and the results, including conclusions and/or recommendations
3. Where the subject studied occurred
4. When the subject studied occurred
5. Why the report was written (function), including under what authority, for what reason, or by whose request
6. How the subject operated, functioned, or was used

Pay attention to these essential elements when you consider your stakeholders, or those who have an interest in the report. That may include the person(s) the report is about, whom it is for, and the larger audience of the business, organization, or industry. Ask yourself who the key decision makers are who will read your report, who the experts or technicians will be, and how executives and workers may interpret your words and images.

While there is no universal format for a report, there is a common order to the information. Each element supports the main purpose or function in its own way, playing an important role in the representation and transmission of information.

ELEMENTS OF A BUSINESS REPORT

The elements of a report vary depending on the organization or structure of the report and there are various styles of organizing a report. Normally reports are organized in three ways-

- Letter-Text Combination Form: Letter-text combination form is the widely adopted form for origination long report. Letter-text combination form finally takes the book form when it is presented or handed over to the authority formally. A complete report in letter-text combination form includes the following parts and sub-divisions
- Letter Form: If the materials of a report are short, brief and informal, they can be arranged as a form of business letter. The main parts of a letter report are heading or title, date, address, salutation, the body, complimentary close and signature. It is usually written in the first person I or We.
- Memorandum Form: A simple way of presenting report is a memorandum form as it maintains less formality. The date of the report is mentioned at the top. It is followed by the name of the person to whom the report is addressed, the name of the writer and the subject of the report. Next follows the actual text and the conclusion. Like the letter form, the text of the report here is also divided into paragraphs with headings and sub heading.

THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE READER

Business reports are quite often intended for a wide variety of different audiences. It is critical that you carefully identify the intended audience for your report, otherwise it is likely that your report will be misdirected and less effective. You should consider exactly what the readers of your report already know and what they need to know to make informed decisions.

AN EFFECTIVE REPORT CAN BE WRITTEN GOING THROUGH THE FOLLOWING STEPS-

1. Determine the objective of the report, i.e., identify the problem.
2. Collect the required material (facts) for the report.
3. Study and examine the facts gathered.
4. Plan the facts for the report.
5. Prepare an outline for the report, i.e., draft the report.
6. Edit the drafted report.

7. Distribute the draft report to the advisory team and ask for feedback and recommendations.

THE ESSENTIALS OF GOOD/EFFECTIVE REPORT WRITING ARE AS FOLLOWS-

1. Know your objective, i.e., be focused.
2. Analyze the niche audience, i.e., make an analysis of the target audience, the purpose for which audience requires the report, kind of data audience is looking for in the report, the implications of report reading, etc.
3. Decide the length of report.
4. Disclose correct and true information in a report.
5. Discuss all sides of the problem reasonably and impartially. Include all relevant facts in a report.
6. Concentrate on the report structure and matter. Pre-decide the report writing style. Use vivid structure of sentences.
7. The report should be neatly presented and should be carefully documented.
8. Highlight and recap the main message in a report.
9. Encourage feedback on the report from the critics. The feedback, if negative, might be useful if properly supported with reasons by the critics. The report can be modified based on such feedback.
10. Use graphs, pie-charts, etc to show the numerical data records over years.
11. Decide on the margins on a report. Ideally, the top and the side margins should be the same (minimum 1 inch broad), but the lower/bottom margins can be one and a half times as broad as others.
12. Attempt to generate reader's interest by making appropriate paragraphs, giving bold headings for each paragraph, using bullets wherever required, etc.

DIFFERENT TYPES OF REPORTS USED IN BUSINESS ARE:

- Informational reports. These reports present facts about certain given activity in detail without any note or suggestions. Whatever is gathered is reported without giving any thing by way of either explanation or any suggestion. A vice-chancellor asking about the number of candidates appearing at a particular examination naturally seeks only information of the fact (candidates taking up the examination) of course without any comment. Generally such reports are of routine nature. Sometimes they may fall under statutory routine category. A company registrar asking for allotment return within the stipulate period is nothing but informational routine, falling under statutory but routine report.

- Analytical reports. These reports contain facts along with analytical explanations offered by the reporter himself or may be asked for by the one who is seeking the report. Such reports contain the narration of facts, collected data and information, classified and tabulated data and also explanatory note followed by the conclusions arrived at or interpretations. A company chairman may ask for a report on falling trends in sale in a particular area. He will in this case be naturally interested in knowing all the details including that of opinion of any of the investigator.
- Research reports. These reports are based on some research work conducted by either an individual or a group of individuals on a given problem. Indian oil company might have asked its research division to find some substitute for petrol, and if such a study is conducted then a report shall be submitted by the research division detailing its findings and then offering their own suggestions, including the conclusions at which the division has arrived at as to whether such a substitute is these and if it is there can the same be put to use with advantage and effectively. All details shall naturally be asked and has to be given. In fact such a report is the result of a research.
- Statutory reports. These reports are to be presented according to the requirements of a particular law or a rule or a custom now has become a rule. The auditor reports to company registrar has to be submitted as per the requirements of country legal requirement. A return on compensation paid to factory workers during a period by a factory has to be submitted to competent authorities periodically. These reports are generally prepared in the prescribed form as the rules have prescribed.
- Non statutory reports. These reports are not in the nature of legal requirements or rules wants, therefore, the reports are to be prepared and submitted. These reports are required to be prepared and submitted: (i) for the administrative and other conveniences,(ii) for taking decision in a matter (iii) for policy formulations, (iv) for projecting the future or (v) any thing alike so that efficient and smooth functioning maybe assured and proper and necessary decision may be taken with a view to see that every thing goes well and the objectives of the organization are achieved with assured success.

- Routine reports. These reports are required to be prepared and submitted periodically on matters required by the organization so as to help the management of the organization to take decisions in the matters relating to day to day affairs. The main objectives of routine reports are to let the management know as to what is happening in the organization, what is its progress where the deviation is, what measures have been taken in solving the problems and what to do so that the organization may run smoothly and efficiently. Routine reports are generally brief. They only give the facts. No comments or explanations are usually offered in such reports. Generally forms are prescribed for preparation and submission of such reports.
- Special reports. Such a type of report is specially required to be prepared and submitted on matters of special nature. Due to an accident a death of the foreman has occurred in a factory. The factory manager may ask for a detail report from the head foreman. Such a report is classified as special reports. These reports contain not only facts and details but they may contain suggestion, comments and explanations as well.

CLASSIFICATION OF BUSINESS REPORT

Business reports can be of various types. On the basis of mode of presentation it can be oral or written. On the basis of degree of formality it can be formal or informal, formal reports again can be divided into two types (i) informational and (ii) analytical.

(A) On the basis of mode of presentation:

Any report can be presented either in written form or in oral.

1. Oral report:

When report on a matter presented verbally or through oral media then it is known as oral report. In this case, after investigating the matter the investigator express his/her findings verbally to the top management.

It is less effective because it cannot be used as documentary evidence.

2. Written report:

On the other hand when reports are presented in written form then it is called written report. Written reports are prepared by following specific format. It has documentary evidence.

(B) On the basis of degree of formality:

Business reports can be prepared either by following specific formats and formalities or it can be drafted informally without maintaining much formalities. Thus on the basis of degree of formality business reports can be of two types:

1. Formal:

Formal reports are usually detailed. It examines a complex problem in depth and provides recommendations. Formal reports are prepared according to specific formats. This type of report again can be divided in two categories:

(i) Informational:

This type of report presents information on particular topic but does not provide any explanation and recommendations.

Example: Annual reports, progress reports of taskforces, etc.

(ii) Analytical:

Analytical reports not only present and analyze data but also interpret the data and make recommendation. Usually critical problems are analyzed through analytical reports.

Example: Feasibility reports, request approval, evaluation of investment project, etc.

2. Informal: These types of reports are prepared to assist routine managerial functions. These reports are usually written by subordinates. Informal reports are short in length and written in letter or memo, format. These reports are less planned.

ESSENTIAL STAGES OF WRITING A REPORT

All reports need to be clear, concise and well structured. The key to writing an effective report is to allocate time for planning and preparation. With careful planning, the writing of a report will be made much easier. The essential stages of successful report writing are described below. Consider how long each stage is likely to take and divide the time before the deadline between the different stages. Be sure to leave time for final proof reading and checking.

Stage One: Understanding the report brief

This first stage is the most important. You need to be confident that you understand the purpose of your report as described in your report brief or instructions. Consider who the report is for and why it is being written. Check that you understand all the instructions or requirements, and ask your tutor if anything is unclear.

Stage Two: Gathering and information

Once you are clear about the purpose of your report, you need to begin to gather relevant information. Your information may come from a variety of sources, but how much information you will need will depend on how much detail is required in the report. You may want to begin by reading relevant literature to widen your understanding of the topic or issue before you go on to look at other forms of information such as questionnaires, surveys etc. As you read and gather information you need to assess its relevance to your report and select accordingly. Keep referring to your report brief to help you decide what is relevant information.

Stage Three: Organising your material

Once you have gathered information you need to decide what will be included and in what sequence it should be presented. Begin by grouping together points that are related. These may form sections or chapters. Remember to keep referring to the report brief and be prepared to cut any information that is not directly relevant to the report. Choose an order for your material that is logical and easy to follow.

Stage Four: Analyzing your material

Before you begin to write your first draft of the report, take time to consider and make notes on the points you will make using the facts and evidence you have gathered. What conclusions can be drawn from the material? What are the limitations or flaws in the evidence? Do certain pieces of evidence conflict with one another? It is not enough to simply present the information you have gathered; you must relate it to the problem or issue described in the report brief.

Stage Five: Writing the report

Having organised your material into appropriate sections and headings you can begin to write the first draft of your report. You may find it easier to write the summary and contents page at the end when you know exactly what will be included. Aim for a writing style that is direct and precise.

Avoid waffle and make your points clearly and concisely. Chapters, sections and even individual paragraphs should be written with a clear structure. The structure described below can be adapted and applied to chapters, sections and even paragraphs.

- Introduce the main idea of the chapter/section/paragraph
- Explain and expand the idea, defining any key terms.
- Present relevant evidence to support your point(s).
- Comment on each piece of evidence showing how it relates to your point(s).
- Conclude your chapter/section/paragraph by either showing its significance to the report as a whole or making a link to the next chapter/section/paragraph.

Stage Six: Reviewing and redrafting

Ideally, you should leave time to take a break before you review your first draft. Be prepared to rearrange or rewrite sections in the light of your review. Try to read the draft from the perspective of the reader. Is it easy to follow with a clear structure that makes sense? Are the points concisely but clearly explained and supported by relevant evidence?

Writing on a word processor makes it easier to rewrite and rearrange sections or paragraphs in your first draft. If you write your first draft by hand, try writing each section on a separate piece of paper to make redrafting easier.

Stage Seven: Presentation

Once you are satisfied with the content and structure of your redrafted report, you can turn your attention to the presentation. Check that the wording of each chapter/section/subheading is clear and accurate. Check that you have adhered to the instructions in your report brief regarding format and presentation.

Check for consistency in numbering of chapters, sections and appendices. Make sure that all your sources are acknowledged and correctly referenced. You will need to proof read your report for errors of spelling or grammar. If time allows, proof read more than once. Errors in presentation or expression create a poor impression and can make the report difficult to read.

THE STRUCTURE OF A REPORT

The main features of a report are described below to provide a general guide. These should be used in conjunction with the instructions or guidelines provided by your department.

Title Page

This should briefly but explicitly describe the purpose of the report (if this is not obvious from the title of the work). Other details you may include could be your name, the date and for whom the report is written.

Geology of the country around Beacon Hill, Leicestershire

Angus Taylor

2 November 2004

Terms of Reference

Under this heading you could include a brief explanation of who will read the report (audience) why it was written (purpose) and how it was written (methods). It may be in the form of a subtitle or a single paragraph.

A report submitted in fulfillment of the requirements for Course GL456, Department of Geology, and University of Leicester.

(Example of terms of reference)

Summary (Abstract)

The summary should briefly describe the content of the report. It should cover the aims of the report, what was found and what, if any, action is called for. Aim for about 1/2 a page in length and avoid detail or discussion; just outline the main points. Remember that the summary is the first thing that is read. It should provide the reader with a clear, helpful overview of the content of the report.

Exposure of rocks belonging to the Charnian Super group (late Precambrian) were examined in the area around Beacon Hill, north Leicestershire. This report aims to provide details of the stratigraphy at three sites - Copt Oak, Mount St. Bernard Abbey and Oaks in Charlwood. It was observed that at each of these sites, the Charnian Super group consists mainly of volcanoclastic sediments (air-fall and ash-flow tuffs) interblended with mudstones and siltstones. These rocks show features that are characteristic of deposition in shallow water on the flanks of a volcano (e.g. welding and alteration of ignimbrites). Further studies are required to understand depositional mechanisms and to evaluate the present-day thickness of individual rock units.

(Example of a summary (abstract))

Contents (Table of Contents)

The contents page should list the different chapters and/or headings together with the page numbers. Your contents page should be presented in such a way that the reader can quickly scan the list of headings and locate a particular part of the report. You may want to number chapter headings and subheadings in addition to providing page references. Whatever numbering system you use, be sure that it is clear and consistent throughout.

Introduction

The introduction sets the scene for the main body of the report. The aims and objectives of the report should be explained in detail. Any problems or limitations in the scope of the report should be identified, and a description of research methods, the parameters of the research and any necessary background history should be included.

In some reports, particularly in science subjects, separate headings for Methods and Results are used prior to the main body (Discussion) of the report as described below.

Methods

Information under this heading may include: a list of equipment used; explanations of procedures followed; relevant information on materials used, including sources of materials and details of any necessary preparation; reference to any problems encountered and subsequent changes in procedure.

Results

This section should include a summary of the results of the investigation or experiment together with any necessary diagrams, graphs or tables of gathered data that support your results. Present your results in a logical order without comment. Discussion of your results should take place in the main body (Discussion) of the report.

Discussion

The main body of the report is where you discuss your material. The facts and evidence you have gathered should be analyzed and discussed with specific reference to the problem or issue. If your discussion section is lengthy you might divide it into section headings. Your points should be grouped and arranged in an order that is logical and easy to follow. Use headings and subheadings to create a clear structure for your material. Use bullet points to present a series of points in an easy-to-follow list. As with the whole report, all sources used should be acknowledged and correctly referenced. For further guidance check your departmental handbook and the Student Learning Centre guide: Referencing and Bibliographies.

Conclusion

In the conclusion you should show the overall significance of what has been covered. You may want to remind the reader of the most important points that have been made in the report or highlight what you consider to be the most central issues or findings. However, no new material should be introduced in the conclusion.

Appendices

Under this heading you should include all the supporting information you have used that is not published. This might include tables, graphs, questionnaires, surveys or transcripts. Refer to the appendices in the body of your report.

In order to assess the popularity of this change, a questionnaire (Appendix 2) was distributed to 60 employees. The results (Appendix 3) suggest the change is well received by the majority of employees.

Example of use of appendices

Bibliography

Your bibliography should list, in alphabetical order by author, all published sources referred to in your report. There are different styles of using references and bibliographies. Refer to the study guide Referencing and Bibliographies and check your departmental handbook for guidelines. Texts which you consulted but did not refer to directly could be grouped under a separate heading such as 'Background Reading' and listed in alphabetical order using the same format as in your bibliography.

Acknowledgements

Where appropriate you may wish to acknowledge the assistance of particular organisations or individuals who provided information, advice or help.

Glossary of Technical Terms

It is useful to provide an alphabetical list of technical terms with a brief, clear description of each term. You can also include in this section explanations of the acronyms, abbreviations or standard units used in your report.

Dear M. Instructor:

In response to your request to look into the evaluation methods of Mohawk College students, we have completed a report that investigates the current evaluation methods at Mohawk College and studies the prevalence and impediments of evaluations based upon students' ability to work effectively as part of a team.

The study revealed that the current typical course evaluation breakdown involves marks for assignments and examinations as well as some for attendance and participation. There were little or no evaluations based on students' ability to work effectively as part of a team.

Students felt that group assignments helped them understand the material in the course better than other evaluation methods and helped them prepare for the workplace. Students also thought that evaluations based on students' ability to work effectively as part of a team did not evaluate the students' understanding of the material as well as other evaluation methods and were not as fair as other assignments.

Interviews with instructors demonstrated that instructors found group work assessments difficult to administer and hard to determine individual contributions to the group.

Based on these findings, the report recommends that administration at Mohawk College

1. review the academic literature to determine if group work does prepare students for the workplace
2. conduct a wider study of students in other programs and all semesters to determine how students are currently being evaluated
3. encourage evaluation of students using group work evaluations
4. work with faculty to resolve the issues involved with administering group work evaluations

Thank you for the opportunity to complete this study. You can contact us at 555-3333 if you have any questions about the report.

Sincerely,

A CHECKLIST

A checklist is important because it not only gives you a mechanism for your report of the scene, but also serves as a way to ensure that you are thorough in your observations. You are documenting not only what you see but also what you don't see; both of which are important when you get to court. Think of everything you write in your checklist as a potential piece of a puzzle. Your job at the crime scene is to find as many pieces as you can; beginning to form a picture of what happened – what the puzzle looks like.

CHECKLIST FOR ENSURING THAT A REPORT FULFILLS ITS GOALS.

1. Report considers the audience's needs
2. Format follows function of report
3. Format reflects institutional norms and expectations
4. Information is accurate, complete, and documented
5. Information is easy to read
6. Terms are clearly defined
7. Figures, tables, and art support written content
8. Figures, tables, and art are clear and correctly labeled
9. Figures, tables, and art are easily understood without text support
10. Words are easy to read (font, arrangement, organization)
11. Results are clear and concise
12. Recommendations are reasonable and well-supported
13. Report represents your best effort
14. Report speaks for itself without your clarification or explanation

Anything not covered by your checklist should be written in a narrative report. Chances are you've covered most everything if you've been documenting as you go. I can't stress enough the importance of maintaining a checklist when investigating a death scene. It reminds you to look at everything, even when you are distracted. It becomes a guide when piecing the puzzle together. It helps to eliminate the questions.

The ideas presented here are meant to be general in nature. Keep in mind that key to any successful crime scene investigation is close attention to the statutes of the jurisdiction in which you are working. Following such laws and guidelines regarding the collection of evidence may mean the difference between a successful prosecution and the guilty going free. Work closely with you local prosecutor and coroners.

One of the most powerful elements of the checklist is that it can empower people. Although a checklist may be viewed as a rigid list of rules which must be followed, the ambiguity of situations means that we have to be flexible and creative when using checklists.

People have to figure out how to use a checklist to fit their needs, and in some cases, what to do if a checklist doesn't include something. Because checklists cannot include every possibility, we have to be prepared. In some cases, they just provide us with a place to begin.

UNIT-IV- VOCABULARY

SYLLABUS

Unit IV Vocabulary: Words often confused, words often misspelt, common errors in English, Introduction to phonetics, need and use of it, Word stress and sentence stress, Contrastive stress in sentences to highlight different words- intonation- rising and falling tone, fallig and rising tobe, word power, vocabulary , jargon, rate of speech, pitch, tone and clarity of voice.

COMMONLY CONFUSED WORDS

For example, read aloud the following sentences containing the commonly confused words new and knew

The English language contains so many words; no one can say for certain how many words exist. In fact, many words in English are borrowed from other languages. Many words have multiple meanings and forms, further expanding the immeasurable number of English words

Strategies to Avoid Commonly Confused Words

When writing, you need to choose the correct word according to its spelling and meaning in the context. Not only does selecting the correct word improve your vocabulary and your writing, but it also makes a good impression on your readers. It also helps reduce confusion and improve clarity. The following strategies can help you avoid misusing confusing words.

1. Use a dictionary. Keep a dictionary at your desk while you write. Look up words when you are uncertain of their meanings or spellings. Many dictionaries are also available online, and the Internet's easy access will not slow you down. Check out your cell phone or smartphone to see if a dictionary app is available.
2. Keep a list of words you commonly confuse. Be aware of the words that often confuse you. When you notice a pattern of confusing words, keep a list nearby, and consult the list as you write. Check the list again before you submit an assignment to your instructor.
3. Study the list of commonly confused words. You may not yet know which words confuse you, but before you sit down to write, study the words on the list.

. Commonly misspelled English words

- Commonly misspelled English words (UK: misspelt words) are words that are often unintentionally misspelled in general writing. ...
- Within a particular field of study, such as computer graphics, other words might be more common for misspelling, such as "pixel" misspelled as "pixle" (or variants "cesium" and "caesium").

Overview of Phonetics, Homophones and their Importance in Effective Communication

To emerge as a winner and stand apart from the crowd in today's fierce competitive world, an individual must have excellent communication skills. Communication is not only interacting with others but successfully conveying the message to the recipients and also get the appropriate feedback.

How do you capture the interest of the listeners? How will you ensure that the listener is with you till the end or not?

Communication is just not using complicated words or terminologies but is also to correctly pronounce them. It is commonly observed that our communication suffers due to our incorrect pronunciations. The alphabets and the words must sound correct to make the communication impressive.

How will one come to know that your pronunciation is correct or not? How will you find out whether you are sounding correct or not?

Here comes the importance of Phonetics.

Phonetics is a part of the English language which helps us to understand sounds of various alphabets. How an alphabet should sound is taught to us with the help of Phonetics.

How a word should sound depends on our tongue movements, vocal cords, lip movements and even our breath.

For example to pronounce the alphabet “B” both our upper and lower lip must touch each other, to pronounce the alphabet “G”, our tongue touches our upper palate. For the correct sound of “O” both our lips should make a complete circle.

Phonetics has three divisions:

1. Articulatory Phonetics - It includes the movement of our sensory organs like tongue, lips as well as our vocal cords to pronounce a particular alphabet.
2. Acoustic phonetics - It is concerned with the frequency and wavelength of our speech.
3. Auditory phonetics - It depends on how our brain and ears perceive the sound.

Phonetics plays a very important role in improving our communication. All the alphabets and the words must sound correctly; else the content as well as our communication will lack lustre and sound unimpressive.

In the same way homophones also play an important role in communication.

Homophones are the words which have different meanings but are pronounced in exactly the same way.

Knew and new are Homophones, where knew is the past tense of know and new is the opposite of old.

“I knew you will fair well in your interview”

“I would prefer to wear my new dress for tomorrow’s party”

Different meanings but exactly the same sound.

Peace and Piece are again examples of Homophones. The sound is exactly the same but there is a huge difference in their meanings. It is essential to understand Homophones for an effective written communication.

“I want a bread peace”

“My head is aching terribly and there is no piece here”

The wrong words have changed the meaning of the sentence completely and they fail to make any sense, however during verbal communication, the words hardly make any difference.

“There is a bird sitting on the branch”

Peter and David are not serious with their careers”

Again a wrong usage of words. Although there and their have exactly similar pronunciations, but their meanings are completely different. If an individual doesn't understand the correct usage of the words, the written communication will be completely screwed up.

There are some homophones which have different meanings but have similar spellings. Such words are called Homonyms or Homographs

Homophones which are spelled differently are called as heterographs. In the above example, peace and piece are heterographs. Bash and Bass are homonyms as their spellings are exactly the same but one bash refers to a good beating and the other means a Party. Rose also means a flower and also is the opposite of rise-another example of homonyms.

Phonetics and homophones are the basics of communication. Unless and until one is clear with phonetics and homophones, his written as well as verbal communication is bound to get hampered. It is important to understand properly what phonetics and homophones are for an effective and impressive verbal as well as non verbal communication.

RHYTHM

Rhythm in English comes from two different areas:

1-Word stress

In order to understand word stress in English, you need to know what a syllable is. A syllable can only be one of two things:

1 vowel OR

1 vowel + 1 consonant

To have a syllable then, you must have at least 1 vowel. The number of consonants is not important. For example: sun.

[s] is consonant [u] is a vowel [n] is a consonant

That means the word [sun] has 2 consonants and 1 vowel. So how many syllables does it mean the word [sun] has? The answer is: 1 syllable. The reason is that it only has 1 vowel.

One more example: how about the word [Macdonald]?

[m] is a consonant

[a] is a vowel

[c] is a consonant

[d] is a consonant

[o] is a vowel

[n] is a consonant

[a] is a vowel

[l] is a consonant

[d] is a consonant

How many vowels does the word [Macdonald] have then? 3 vowels.

Mac do nald

So when you pronounce the word [Macdonald], you should only pronounce 3 syllables, not 4 and not 5, otherwise, listeners will be very confused and will probably ask you to repeat, which can be embarrassing.

Most 2 or 3-syllable words also have 1 stress but... some 4 or more syllable words could have 2 stresses, 1 primary stress and 1 secondary stress.

Let's see some examples of word stress:

KARPAGAM ACADEMY OF HIGHER EDUCATION, COIMBATORE

1-syllable word	in	o
2-syllable word	instant	Oo
3-syllable word	instantly	Ooo
4-syllable word	instantiate	oOoo
5-syllable word	instantaneous	ooOoo
6-syllable word	instantaneously	ooOooo

2-Sentence Stress

In English, sentence stress is the key to creating the rhythm of the language. Rhythm, among a few other things, is what native speakers depend on to understand the message(s) of the speaker. In English, we usually stress...

1- Nouns	2- Verbs	3- Adverbs
Example 1
My	friend's	in vi ted me to
Pronoun	Noun	Verb Pronoun Preposition
o	O	o O o

Do not be confused between word stress and sentence stress. In word stress, we look at the syllable we stress in a word, but in sentence stress, we look at the word we stress in a sentence.

Now let's make the sentence longer by adding an adjective and adverb.

Example 2
My	new	friend's	in	vi	ted	me	to
PRO	ADJ	NOUN	VERB			PRON	PREP
o	O	o	o	O	o	o	o

It depends on the purpose of the message we're trying to communicate, but in general, we stress the nouns, verbs, adjectives and adverbs (content words) in the sentence as they are the ones that essentially carry the full weight of the message.

Notice that [my] [the] [me] [to] and [his] (referred to as "function" words) were not stressed in example 2 because they bore no impact on the meaning of the sentence. That is generally the case. However, there are many situations when we do stress the "function" words as follows:

1-My new friend's invited ME to his party (not YOU)

2-My friend's invited me to HIS party (not YOUR party)

Contrastive Stress

There is one word in most phrases that receives the phrase (sentence) stress under ordinary occasions. However, the stress can always be shifted from this normal place to some other place in the sentence. This shifting always changes the meaning of the phrase somewhat or makes it fit into some special context. As Çelik (2003:58) indicates that when a choice for contrast is not intended on a contrasted item or notion crops up in conversation, the contrasted item or notion should be intelligible to the address. In other words, the contrasted item should make sense in the context of discourse at the time and place of speaking.

The simple sentence below can have many levels of meaning based on the word you stress according to the contrastive choices. The stressed words are written in bold.

1. I don't think he should get the job.

Meaning: Somebody else thinks he should get the job.

2. I don't think he should get the job.

Meaning: It's not true that I think he should get the job.

3. I don't think he should get the job.

Meaning: That's not really what I mean. Or I'm not sure he'll get the job.

4. I don't think he should get the job.

Meaning: Somebody else should get the job.

5. I don't think he should get the job.

Meaning: In my opinion it is wrong that he is going to get the job.

6. I don't think he should get the job.

Meaning: He should have to earn that job.

7. I don't think he should get the job.

Meaning: He should get another job.

8. I don't think he should get the job.

Meaning: Maybe he should get something else instead.

As we see in the example, the meaning changes when we shift the stress in the phrase according to our contrastive choices.

In an answer statement, a word has the stress on it when it is contrasted with an item in the question statement. It is more clearly understood with the examples below:

A) Would you prefer coffee or tea?

B) Tea, please.

The answer shows which option you choose in respond to the question, so 'tea' has the contrastive stress.

A) Did you go to the campus yesterday or not?

B) I went to the campus yesterday.

The verb 'went' appears to be the old information and it has the meaning of confirmation.

A) Did you park your car inside the garage?

B) No, I parked my car outside.

'Outside' is contrasted with 'inside'. The meaning is: the car is parked outside, not inside.

Contrastive stress does not only appear in response statement, it can also be seen in the speech of one speaker. Let's look at the example:

'Tom is very good at football whereas he is really bad at doing other sports.'

INTONATION

In linguistics, intonation is variation in spoken pitch when used, not for distinguishing words (a concept known as tone), but, rather, for a range of other functions such as indicating the attitudes and emotions of the speaker, signalling the difference between statements and questions, and between different types of questions, focusing attention on important elements of the spoken message and also helping to regulate conversational interaction. (The term tone is used by some British writers in their descriptions of intonation but to refer to the pitch movement found on the nucleus or tonic syllable in an intonation unit.)

Although intonation is primarily a matter of pitch variation, it is important to be aware that functions attributed to intonation such as the expression of attitudes and emotions, or highlighting aspects of grammatical structure, almost always involve concomitant variation in other prosodic features. David Crystal for example says that "intonation is not a single system of contours and levels, but the product of the interaction of features from different prosodic systems – tone, pitch-range, loudness, rhythmicity and tempo in particular

Rising Intonation means the pitch of the voice rises over time. Falling Intonation means that the pitch falls with time. Dipping or Fall-rise Intonation falls and then rises. Peaking or Rise-fall Intonation rises and then falls.

A rising intonation pattern would simply be a rise in the human voice; it would be a change in pitch; a glide in the pitch of our voice upwards. Listen to the video.

Examples of Rising Intonation:

We tend to use this rising intonation pattern when we're asking questions. So the pitch of our voice tends to go up. So for instance:

- 'when does the meeting start?' - '...start?' rises up, it comes up in the voice
- 'would you like a cup of tea?' - '...tea?' rises up

The question is a sort of way of sending out an invitation for some kind of response from whoever you're speaking to.

We do sometimes use a falling intonation, which I'll talk more about in a moment, for some sorts of questions, but typically speaking we tend to use this rising intonation for questions.

Examples of Rising Intonation:

Another instance in which we would use this upward or rising inflection would be on lists. So if I'm saying:

- 'I'd like some eggs, some milk, some cheese and some bread.'

Each item is spoken with a rising intonation, and we would use a falling intonation on 'bread' to say that we've finished the list. On lists and most questions we would use this rising intonation pattern.

Examples of Falling Intonation:

A falling intonation or downward intonation pattern, would simply mean that the pitch of the voice drops down. Listen to the video. So I would say, for instance, if I'm making a statement or exclamation:

- 'that's wonderful'

...that's one instance in which I would use a falling intonation.

Examples of Falling Intonation:

Commands is another situation, so I would say:

- 'put that down!'
- 'go over there'

- ‘stand against the wall’
- ‘put that over there’

...all of which would have falling intonation.

Statements, commands and exclamations, those are the three instances in which we use this falling intonation.

Vocabulary

Having a good vocabulary will help you to improve your language level and become a more confident speaker of English. Decide which area of vocabulary you need help with today and choose a topic to work on. You can listen to the words in the first exercise to practise your pronunciation. When you do the online interactive exercises, you can see how well you've done.

Practising little and often is the best way to improve your vocabulary, so come back tomorrow to choose another topic to work on.

Jargon

Jargon is a type of language that is used in a particular context and may not be well understood outside that context. The context is usually a particular occupation (that is, a certain trade, profession, or academic field), but any ingroup can have jargon. The main trait that distinguishes jargon from the rest of a language is special vocabulary—including some words specific to it, and often different senses or meanings of words, that outgroups would tend to take in another sense; — therefore misunderstanding that communication attempt. Jargon is thus "the technical terminology or characteristic idiom of a special activity or group".

Most jargon is technical terminology, involving terms of art or industry terms, with particular meaning within a specific industry. A main driving force in the creation of technical jargon is precision and efficiency of communication when a discussion must easily range from general themes to specific, finely differentiated details without circumlocution. A side-effect of this is a higher threshold for comprehensibility, which is usually accepted as a trade-off but is sometimes even used as a means of social exclusion .

Tone, pitch and intonation all refer to different aspects of pronunciation or use of voice. Pitch is the degree of highness or lowness with which one speaks. For example, some people naturally have a high-pitched voice. Emotional factors can also affect the pitch of someone's voice.

Clear Communication Skills

There are many reasons that motivate people to seek out a speech coach, but all of them usually fall into one of three broad categories, and they are clarity, confidence and credibility. Every client that walks into my office is concerned with at least one of those issues, and every improvement we seek is aimed at reinforcing those three critical traits.

Clarity is often considered when we think about content, structuring our thoughts in a logical sequence and choosing the right words. We even acknowledge the importance of things like projection, pronunciation and diction. But good communication skills require more than just language. You need more than just your mouth and your brains.

To communicate well, you must do more than just say the words. You must care for the listener and make sure they get the message. It's easy to overlook that final phase of the process when you have the advantage of knowing what you're about to say, before you've said it. Don't assume you're being clear.

Here are some common obstacles to clarity. Addressing these issues will ensure you have the communication skills to be consistently and easily understood.

Fast rate is one of the most common causes of unclear speech. Vowel sounds get shortened and words become a jumble of consonants. Slowing the rate of your speech gives you time to form sounds accurately and gives your listeners time to absorb what you've said. Learning to breathe deeply while speaking is one of the most effective strategies for slowing down naturally.

Mumbling often goes hand in hand with fast speech. When you speak quickly, your mouth doesn't have time to open very far. Speech sounds get distorted while being squeezed through your teeth. Practicing jaw and tongue relaxation creates more openness in your mouth and encourages more precision in the formation of vowels and consonants.

A quiet voice often contributes to a lack of clarity. When you're not putting enough sound into the room, your listeners have nothing to work with. Using more breath, feeling sound vibrations in your body and allowing your voice to fill the room will generate more power, without straining. Remember, your voice will seem louder to you than it sounds to your listeners. Get used to it.

An accent can make it difficult for others to understand you. There's nothing wrong with accents. In fact, everyone has one, depending on who's listening. But a strong accent can lead to confusion and even frustration, especially if it's combined with a quiet voice and/or fast speech. Learning to improve a few strategically selected language skills will often produce dramatic improvements in clarity. But first, make sure you're speaking slowly and projecting well. That might be all that's required.

Failure to speak clearly is not a minor inconvenience; it has serious implications for your personal image and professional success. When listeners struggle to understand you, they eventually ignore you. Addressing the underlying causes enables you to communicate fluently and distinctly. Enhancing clarity not only strengthens your communication skills, it improves your image and makes others more responsive to your message.

ANSWER ALL THE QUESTIONS

24. a. Define communication and explain the importance of business communication?

The exchange of information or passing of information, ideas or thought from one person to the other or from one end to the other is communication. According to McFarland communication is, “a process of meaningful interaction among human beings. More specifically, it is the process by which meanings are perceived and understandings are reached among human beings.”.

Importance of Communication:

Effective communication is vital for efficient management and to improve industrial relations. In modern world the growth of telecommunication, information technology and the growing competition and complexity in production have increased importance of communication in organisations large and small irrespective of their type and kind. A corporate executive must be in a position to communicate effectively with his superiors, colleagues in other departments and subordinates. This will make him perform well and enable him to give his hundred percent to the organisation.

1. Base for Action:

Communication acts as a base for any action. Starting of any activity begins with communication which brings information necessary to begin with.

2. Planning Becomes Easy:

Communication facilitates planning. Planning is made easy by communication. Any type of information regarding the human resource requirement of each department of the organisation with their qualifications, the type and kinds of job etc. can be collected through communication which helps in human resource planning. Policies and programmes for their acquisition can be prepared and implemented. In the entire process communication plays a vital role, it also facilitates managerial planning of the organization.

3. Means of Coordination:

Communication is an important tool for coordinating the efforts of various people at work in the organisation

4. Aids in Decision-Making:

The information collected through communication aids in decision-making. Communication facilitates access to the vital information required to take decisions.

5. Provides Effective Leadership:

A communication skill bring manager near to his subordinates and exchange ideas and submits appropriate proposals, knows their opinions, seeks advices and make decisions. This enables a manager to win confidence of his subordinates through constantly communicating with them and removing probable misunderstandings. In this way he leads his people to accomplish the organisational goal.

6. Boosts Morale and Motivation:

An effective communication system instills confidence among subordinates and workers ensuring change in their attitude and behaviour. The main cause of conflict and dissatisfaction is misunderstanding which can be removed through communication skills. The removal of misunderstanding makes manager and his subordinates understand each other and create good industrial relations. This boosts up the morale of the people and motivates them to work harder.

b. Elucidate the different types of communication with suitable examples?

There are two types of business communication in an organization:

- Internal Communication
- External Communication

1. Internal Communication

Communication within an organization is called “Internal Communication”. It includes all communication within an organization. It may be informal, formal function, or department providing communication in various forms to employees.

Effective internal communication is a vital mean of addressing organizational concerns. Good communication may help to increase job satisfaction, safety, productivity, and profits and decrease grievances and turnover.

Under Internal Business Communication types, there come:

- UpwardCommunication

Upward communication is the flow of information from subordinates to superiors, or from employees to management. Without upward communication, management works in a vacuum, not knowing if the messages have been received properly, or if other problems exist in the organization. By definition, communication is a two-way affair. Yet for effective two-way organizational communication to occur, it must begin from the bottom.

Upward Communication is a mean for the staff to:

- Exchange information
- Offer ideas
- Express enthusiasm
- Achieve job satisfaction
- Provide feedback
- DownwardCommunication

Information flowing from the top of the organizational management hierarchy and telling people in the organization what is important (mission) and what is valued (policies). Downward communication generally provides information – which allows a subordinate to do something. For example, instructions on how to complete a task. Downward communication comes after upward communications have been successfully established.

This type of communication is needed in an organization to:

- Transmit vital information
- Give instructions
- Encourage 2-way discussion
- Announce decisions
- Seek cooperation
- Provide motivation
- Boost morale
- Increase efficiency
- Obtain feedback

Both Downward & Upward Communications are collectively called “Vertical Communication”

- Horizontal/Literalcommunication

Horizontal communication normally involves coordinating information, and allows people with the same or similar rank in an organization to cooperate or collaborate. Communication among employees at the same level is crucial for the accomplishment of the assigned work.

Horizontal Communication is essential for:

- Solving problems
- Accomplishing tasks
- Improving teamwork
- Building goodwill
- Boosting efficiency

2. External Communication

Communication with people outside the company is called “external communication”. Supervisors communicate with sources outside the organization, such as vendors and customers.

It leads to better:

- Sales volume
- Public credibility
- Operational efficiency
- Company profits

It should improve:

- Overall performance
- Public goodwill
- Corporate image

Ultimately, it helps to achieve:

- Organizational goals
- Customer satisfaction

25. a. Elucidate the physical and semantic barriers for effective communication?

Physical Barriers

In some cases, you can control your physical environment, such as by taking a colleague into a meeting room. Other times, you must communicate in the midst of distractions. Background noise is a common and disturbing physical communication barrier. Loud or piercing noises make it difficult to hear, and may contribute to miscommunication. Bad lighting, which blocks nonverbal gestures, limits the ability of a receiver to interpret a message. Other people or distracting images in the environment can affect message delivery or receipt as well. Static on a phone line affects telephone conversations. Poor grammar, spelling or word choices in an e-mail impact electronic communication.

Semantic Barriers

Semantic barriers result when a speaker chooses words or makes statements that aren't easily interpreted by the listener. If you say, "Let's go clubbing tonight," a new friend may not know exactly what you mean. One person may interpret this message as going to a club to hang out. Another may interpret it to mean traveling around to multiple clubs. Profanity or vulgar language can distract an offended listener from the message. Unclear use of words is a semantic barrier as well. Someone might say, "Johnny is a loser," to convey that Johnny often loses at games, while a listener might interpret this message as meaning Johnny is lazy or has negative personal qualities.

Types of Semantic Barriers in Communication

Denotative Barriers

Direct meaning of any word which must be shared by two people to understand each other is the denotative meaning. The barriers that arise due to the definition or meaning of a word used differently by sender and receiver is denotative barriers of communication. They disagree on the meaning of a word as they are unaware of the other persons' meaning.

For example, the meaning of braces which is used to define the metallic structure to adjust teeth in American English whereas it means a part of clothing in British English.

Connotative Barriers

The implied meaning of a word is known as Connotative meaning. Connotative barrier in communication refers to the difference of meaning according to different abstract situations, contexts, actions and feelings. Both the communicators know both meanings of the word, but use only one meaning according to the context, which might be being used differently in the context.

For example, the word astonish can be used to describe surprise as well as startle. The words, when used by someone, can have any of the meaning. The context in which it is used will only let the receiver know what the sender means. Another example is the word god, which is used differently by people following different religions

b. Elaborate the various types of media in business communication.

Media or channel is the means or ways of transmitting the messages from sender to the receiver. The media of oral communication are face to face conversation, telephone or mobile, conference, meetings etc. The media of written communication are newspaper, letter, report, memo, mail.

1. Telephone

The telephone was the first electronic channel to gain wide acceptance for business use. Telephones are everywhere—at least in the industrialized world. The telephone offers many advantages. It is often the fastest, most convenient means of communicating with someone. The telephone is also economical in comparison with the cost of writing and sending a letter or the travel involved in face-to-face meetings. Although standard telephone equipment limits sender and receiver to exchanging vocal information, tone of voice, rate of speech, and other vocal qualities help sender and receiver understand each other's messages.

Modern telephone services expand the utility of the telephone through answering machines and voice mail, telephone conferencing, portable phones, pagers, and other devices designed to extend the speed and reach of the telephone as a communication device.

2. Radio

Although its business uses are limited, radio is an effective means of broadcasting information to many people at once. For this reason, radio is a form of mass communication. The mass media also include newspapers, popular magazines, and television. Radio and other forms of mass communication do not allow for convenient, prompt feedback. Receivers who wish to provide feedback on a particular message typically need to use some other communication channel— telephone, email, or letter—to respond to a sender. The most common business use of radio is for advertising, primarily at the local level.

3 . Television

Television, another of the mass media, is also an effective means of broadcasting information to many people at once. In addition to using commercial television for advertising, business has been making increasing use of TV for education and training programs and videoconferencing. Because it combines auditory and visual images, TV provides a fairly effective substitute for face-to-face communication when time, distance, or cost of travel would make face-to-face communication difficult

4. Electronic Mail

Email has recently become the most common form of business communication, substituting for letters, memos, and many telephone calls. It is quick, convenient, and—once the appropriate hardware and software are installed—inexpensive. Most organizations in the industrialized world now have email and access to the Internet, a world-wide network connecting most of the world's major computer networks. Although email permits most of the advantages of other forms of written communication, email users tend to prepare email messages quickly and with less attention to detail, including grammatical and mechanical correctness, than they do when preparing paper documents.

5. Electronic Conferencing

Although mailing lists enable large numbers of people to participate in discussions about issues of common interest, they are not well-suited to organizing that information in a logical way. Messages are sent and received in chronological order rather than by topic. Also, even though mailing lists store or archive messages, retrieving information about a particular topic from the archives may not be easy. Electronic conferences eliminate those problems by categorizing subjects by topics or threads. Access to such conferences can also be easily restricted to qualified individuals, making them useful for discussions of proprietary matters.

6. Web-based Communication

Since its inception in 1992, the portion of the Internet known as the World Wide Web—or more simply as the Web—has grown at virtually an exponential rate. Most organizations of any size and thousands of individuals have Web sites, which consist of one or more pages of information. One of the reasons that the Web has grown at such a phenomenal rate is that it provides many of the advantages of the other communication channels with very few of their disadvantages

26. a. Elucidate the essentials of effective business letter.

Qualities of a Good Business Letter:

1. Clarity:

Clear thinking and simple expression are the two important virtues of effective writing. A good letter should show its idea directly and clearly. Each sentence should be as simple as possible. The reader should have no difficulty in understanding what the writer means to say. When the reader gets the same meaning from the message as what the sender intended, it is a good letter.

2. Conciseness:

Transmission of maximum information by using minimum words should be the aim of letter-writing. Unnecessary details and roundabout expressions should be avoided. People are busy and they receive a number of letters daily. Unless one says quickly what one wishes to say, he will not be able to get the attention of the reader and focus it on the message. Therefore, a letter should be simple and brief.

3. Completeness:

The letter should contain all the essential points a reader is expected to know. For example, a sales letter should include the description of the goods, price, quality, how and where to buy, the date of delivery, discounts etc. If it gives only partial information, it is not a complete letter.

4. Correctness:

The correctness demands no error at all in grammar, idiom, spelling, and punctuation. Besides, the information given in the letter must be accurate; otherwise it will shake the confidence of the reader. The message should not be transmitted unless the sender is sure of its correctness.

5. Courtesy:

Courtesy means politeness. It always pays to be courteous in business. It softens the sting of an unpleasant piece of information, creates goodwill and produces a favourable response. Goodwill is a great asset for an organisation and courtesy in correspondence is one of the most natural and economical means of building it.

6. Cheerfulness:

There should be no negative approach in a letter. It must begin with a positive and optimistic note. The approach should be friendly and convincing.

7. Promptness:

Promptness in replying a letter is absolutely necessary. The general practice is to reply a letter the same day it is received. When it is known that a reply to a letter requires time it is necessary to acknowledge the letter received and intimate the probable time required sending full reply.

8. Appropriateness:

Appropriateness refers to writing or replying letters keeping in mind the relation and psychology of the reader as well as the need of the occasion. The tone, style and language should be changed according to the occasion.

9. The 'You' attitude:

In business letters, the reader's interest must be emphasised and not the sender's interest. To make letters effective, avoid words such as 'I' and 'we' and use as many as 'you' as possible. The 'you attitude' can be used effectively in all kinds of business letters.

10. Integral:

The purpose of business communication is to create understanding, bring about cooperation and initiate constructive action. Therefore, all communication should be in conformity with the general objectives of the organisation.

b. Explain in detail on social correspondence.

Social correspondence includes all varieties of personal writings between acquaintances. Some examples of social correspondence are personal thank you notes, invitations, letters and cards. Although social correspondence often is casual in nature, there is a proper etiquette that applies even to correspondence among friends. Social correspondence includes personal letters, notes, invitation letters, cards and thank you letters.

The Social Letters which are written to relations and intimate friends should be written in an easy, conversational style. The Social letters are really of the nature of friendly chat: and, being as a rule unpremeditated and spontaneous compositions, they are informal and free-and-easy as compared with essays. Just as in friendly talks, as in friendly letters, we can touch on many subjects and in any order we like. And we can use colloquial expressions which would in formal essays be quite out of place. But this does not mean that we can be careless and slovenly in dashing off our letters. For, it is insulting to ask a friend to decipher a badly written, ill-composed and confusing scrawl. The Social Letters which are written to relations and intimate friends should be written in an easy, conversational style. So, it must be for us to take care and preserve some order in expressing our thoughts. Above all, it must be remembered that, however free-and-easy may be our style, we are as much bound by the rules of spelling, punctuation, grammar and idiom in writing a letter as we are in writing the most formal letter. The Social Letters which are written to relations and intimate friends should be written in an easy, conversational style. Such ungrammatical expressions as "an advice, those sort of things and he met my brother and I" are not permissible both in a friendly letter and in a business letter. Mistakes in spelling, punctuation and grammar at once stamp a letter-writer as uneducated

2. You cannot talk if the recipient of the call is unavailable or engaged in talking to someone else.
3. Some of the neighbors are so frank and free that they give your number to their relatives and friends. If you fail to call the neighbor at an odd hour when the phone rings for him, he will become angry and sweetness of neighborhood would change into bitterness. They fail to think of your comfort.

26. a. Describe the importance for choosing power point presentation.

Using the right Powerpoint font can have a positive impact on your audience's understanding of your message, and their reaction to it. Typography is an integral part of design, and it plays a big role in the effectiveness of your PowerPoint presentations. And not just from an aesthetic perspective.

The first mistake a lot of people make when choosing their PowerPoint font is looking for something 'cool', and many users are quick to write off fonts like Arial for being boring. Don't fall into that trap. When it comes to many PowerPoint presentations functional is more important than fancy, and some of the most standard-looking fonts are also the best at making your slides look clean and professional.

Which fonts should I avoid?

Handwriting-style fonts such as Mistral and Viner Hand – while fun in some situations – can make your slides look unprofessional as well as being virtually impossible to read from a distance. Similarly, 'quirky' fonts such as Comic Sans are more appropriate for material aimed at children than corporate presentations.

Display fonts such as Forte and Stencil should be used sparingly, for example as large headers. Never use a display font for text smaller than 14pt.

Serif or sans serif?

Sans serif fonts (the ones without curly bits) are usually the best choice for headers. Arial, Helvetica, Tahoma, and Verdana are just a few of them. Serif fonts (with curly bits) such as Times New Roman are great for body text and will make text-heavy slides more readable.

Things to keep in mind when choosing a PowerPoint font for your presentation:

Font size

Depending on how your slides will be presented, the general rule for presentation content is the bigger the better. Audience members sitting at the back of the room won't appreciate having to squint at 12pt text, and they're definitely less likely to remember your message.

Readability

Presenters often layer text with other elements on their slides, such as full image backgrounds. Use contrasting colours or place colour bars behind text to maximise readability.

Consistency

Stick to a maximum of 3 fonts throughout your presentation – preferably 2. For example, one sans serif font for all your headers, and a serif font for the rest.

Audience

Different fonts appeal to different people, so keep your audience in mind when scrolling down the font list. If you're presenting to a room full of finance execs, using a swirly, decorative font isn't likely to earn you much respect.
